Food Ships Run Tientsin Blockade, Avert Hunger

Japanese Tighten Cordon; Foreigners Reported Beaten; Amoy Isolated

The West Watches

GREAT BRITAIN, FRANCE and the United States kept in close touch on the Far Eastern crisis at Tientsin as Prime Minister Chamberlain quoted a Japanese statesman as saying Japan's real objective was to obtain a "wider form of co-operation from Britain." Page 5.

AMERICAN PUBLIC sympathy for China has increased sharply in the last year and a half, with overwhelming majority favoring boycott of Japanese goods and an embargo on shipment of American war materials to Japan, Gallup poll reveals. Page 2.

Food Slips By

By the United Press.

Tientsin, China (Friday), June 16. The Japanese Navy tonight threatened to send gunboats up the Hai River to tighten the blockade of the British concession here after vegetable ships succeeded in relieving a serious food shortage.

A Japanese naval spokesman said that naval units, unused thus far in the Tientsin blockade, were "ready for anything necessary."

Additional Japanese troops and tanks were used today to isolate the British and French concessions. Japanese warships encircled the foreign area of Amoy in a new blockade and Britain was warned of an "even greater" crisis should reprisals be attempted.

Britons entering or leaving the Tientsin concession were, in some instances, stripped by searching Japanese sentries.

Foreigners Reported Beaten

Foreign consulates general were busy handling complaints of violence, including beatings of foreign nationals by Japanese.

The threat of more extreme measures came after three Japanese tanks rumbled up to the barbed-wire barricades around the British concession here.

It was alleged that British troops had mounted a machine gun and pointed it at Japanese sentries searching and in some cases stripping the clothing from persons entering or leaving the area.

"The situation is growing worse," said a Japanese spokesman, adding that he believed a local settlement eventually might be reached on Japan's broad demands against the British for domination of all the foreign concessions in China.

Emperor Consulted

At Tokyo it was announced that five key cabinet ministers will meet today, summoned after Japan's top-ranking military leaders consulted with Emperor Hirohito. It appeared that the ministers would be asked to pass on important measures already given imperial sanction.

The "big five" in the Japanese cabinet are Premier Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma, Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita, War Minister Seishiro Itagaki, Navy Minister Mitsumasa Yonai and Finance Minister Sotaro Ishiwata.

There was no indication of what these measures might be—possibly an intensification of the Tientsin blockade by use of Japanese naval forces—but only on matters of extraordinary gravity is imperial consent required.

[Britain insisted last night that Japanese cease halting and searching British subjects and ships. Japanese reiterated that their "strong attitude will be continued until British authorities completely change their pro-Chiang Kai-shek attitude," according to the Associated Press.—Editor's note.]

Early today the almost deserted streets of the British concession

At the time of his death he was director of the State sales tax division. He lived at Fremont, Mich. Longyear, who spent 30 years as Reo production manager, was business manager of the State tax board.

Senate Votes $5,675,000 for 15,000 Pilots

20,000 Students Will Be Trained Annually After First Year

The last phase of President Roosevelt's special defense program neared final Congressional action yesterday as the Senate approved legislation to train 20,000 college students annually as civilian fliers.

Proposed as a means of creating a large potential reserve for the Army and Navy air forces in wartime, the plan is expected to prove a great boost for aviation generally by developing large numbers of civilian pilots and stimulating demands for small private airplanes.

Amendments made by the Senate, limiting the cost of the program and placing employes under Civil Service, sent the bill back to the House for further action. The Senate fixed the annual cost of the training at $7,000,000, with a limit of $5,675,000 the first year. Officials said the latter sum would permit only 15,000 students next year, with the full 20,000 possible under the larger sum.

Meanwhile, the War Department awarded a $1,500,000 contract for an undisclosed number of small, specially designed observation planes. Capable of taking off and landing from small fields, and of short flying range, the planes are intended for directing artillery fire and other observation work over battlefields. The order went to the Stinson Aircraft Division, Aviation Manufacturing Corporation, of Wayne, Mich.

Under the civil air pilot program, some 200 to 300 universities and colleges will institute air-training courses in September. Commercial pilots at nearby flying fields will carry on the instruction, with the rent of the planes and instructor's fees being paid by the Government. Enrollment in the aviation courses is not limited to regular college students, under the bill.

Sousa's Air Makes D. C. Spine Tingle On Tune's Birthday

By Marshall Andrews

For an audience that sat on rustic benches and sprawled in the cool grass around the District World War Memorial in West Potomac Park last night, the blue-coated band of the United States Marine Corps celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of its most famous leader's most famous composition.

With the swinging music of John Philip Sousa, the Marine Band recalled the stirring moment, 50 years ago yesterday, when it played for the first time "The Washington Post March" on the Smithsonian grounds. And in night clubs, hotels and dance spots "The Washington Post March" was the theme number, while a dramatization of Sousa's musical career was broadcast from Station WJSV.

It was that crowd in Potomac Park, though, under the bright night sky and the brooding trees, that held closest communion with Sousa. They heard the band he did so much to build play as only it can the crashing music of fighting men which has made Sousa immortal.

They sat raptly through an hour and a half of music that told in every beat the story of marching men, of men at war, of all the pomp and pageantry of men of war in peace.

A sergeant of park police told the story as succinctly as ever a man might.

"This is kind of lively tonight," he said. "Usually they play that classical stuff, but tonight they kind of cut that down."

They did. The Marine Band, directed by William F. Santelmann, second leader, in the absence of Capt. Taylor Branson, gave back to the man who led them for a dozen years much of what his martial spirit and his talent for composition had left for their ringing instruments.

With one exception, the program was Sousa from the moment it opened with his Stars and Stripes For-

Rulers Sail From Canada; King's Adieu a Plea for Peace

By the United Press.

Halifax, Nova Scotia, June 15.—After a delay of 29 minutes for a final thunderous ovation, King George and Queen Elizabeth sailed for England at 5:29 p. m. (Eastern standard time).

Fifty-nine minutes earlier they boarded the Empress of Britain at the end of 30 days of almost continuous traveling which carried Their Majesties on an unprecedented tour of 9,127 miles in Canada and the United States.

Before their departure the King and Queen bade farewell to the United States and Canada. The King said their experiences since they landed at Quebec on May 17 marked "some of the most inspiring and illuminating weeks in our lives."

In a farewell broadcast both the King and Queen were profuse in expressions of gratitude. The King expressed a hope for worldwide peace.

For the next 36 hours the Empress of Britain will steam up the coast to Newfoundland. At St. Johns, the capital city, the King and Queen will pay their respects to the oldest colony in the empire. The schedule called for them to dock on home shores June 22.

Although conditions in the north Atlantic were reported to be the worst in years, the master of the Empress of Britain planned to set a course calculated to avoid danger and still make the crossing in a week.

Tens of thousands of persons lined the banks of Citadel Hill and other vantage points in the city to wave and shout farewell. As the Empress moved away they sang "Auld Lang Syne" and "Will Ye No Come Back Again."

Murphy Urges Billion Slash In Public Pay

Government Salaries Cost Average Family $200 a Year, He Says

By the Associated Press.

Asbury Park, N. J., June 15.—A billion-dollar "operation on the public pay roll" to cut more than one million employes from the national, State and local rolls was advocated tonight by Attorney General Murphy.

In a broadcast to the Eastern regional conference of the Civil Service Assembly of the United States and Canada, Murphy declared that 4,000,000 Government employes annually received nearly six billion dollars in salaries, making the cost to the average family $200 a year, or over 13 per cent of its total income.

"I am sure you will agree with me that 13 per cent of a family's annual income for the public pay roll is too much.

"Either family income should be increased or the public pay roll should be reduced. And at this moment the most immediately promising step seems to be an operation on the public pay roll," Murphy observed.

The Attorney General added a "precautionary word," however:

"In saying that our public pay rolls should be reduced, I am not proposing drastic curtailment of governmental functions and activities. On the contrary, I am strongly of the opinion that every governmental function—national, State and local—which is clearly necessary to protect the physical and mental security of our people should be continued.

"I do maintain that instead of

Roosevelt Orders Civilian Directors For CCC Camps

By order of President Roosevelt, the CCC announced yesterday that it would use civilians instead of military supervisors in its camps hereafter.

Reserve officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps have been serving as company commanders, staff officers, physicians, dentists, veterinarians, and chaplains, and have been receiving military pay.

Recently Congress attached to a War Department appropriation bill a rider providing that these officers must get the same disability and other benefits as Army officers. President Roosevelt objected; hence yesterday's order.

Report Due Soon On Court Inquiry

Results of several weeks' inquiry into activities at District Police Court by the Federal Bureau of Investigation will be announced "within the next few days," Attorney General Murphy said yesterday.

1,000 Spy Cases Under FBI Scrutiny

Hoover Tells House Of Espionage Wave; Long, Sure Sentences Urged as a Curb

By Robert C. Albright

A sharp increase in foreign espionage activities in this country yesterday brought a Senate Naval Committee demand for rigid penalties and a Justice Department promise of a co-ordinated counter-spy drive by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Estimating at 1,000 the number of espionage cases awaiting investigation this year, Attorney General Murphy told of a centralized staff set up under F. B. I. Director J. Edgar Hoover to combat foreign spying and "evidence of sabotage."

Testimony by Hoover before the House Appropriations Committee, meanwhile, disclosed a rise in espionage activities from an average of 35 cases in the years preceding 1938 to 634 last year—an unprecedented increase of 599 known cases of espionage over 1937.

In a report to the Senate, the Naval Affairs Committee recommended an augmented counter-espionage staff "if our national defense preparations are to be adequately protected" and asked mandatory jail sentences for aliens convicted of peace-time spying.

Point to Loopholes

Terming "the height of absurdity" present "startling" defects in statutes against theft of confidential data and trespassing in restricted military zones, the Senate committee said:

"In other words, a foreign spy may steal our military secrets, take photographs of war vessels under construction, fly over our navy yards, penetrate our aircraft factories, damage or destroy planes and conspire with others to obtain code books and secret reports on military preparations, and get off with a year or two in prison, if, in fact, he is given a prison term at all."

The committee asked Congress to enact a Bill introduced by Senator Barbour (Republican), of New Jersey, making prison sentences mandatory for all such offenses. A 5-year minimum sentence and a 10-year maximum was fixed in the bill for "lesser" offenses.

Blames World Conditions

Murphy said he thought the upturn in spy cases grows out of present "world-wide conditions." He said the only thing needed to meet it was a good administrative agency and proper liaison with other agencies.

This dovetailed with the Senate committee's report that the F. B. I. has been given responsibility for all civilian counter-espionage work in the United States and its possessions.

The Senate Navy Committee reported "widespread evidence of foreign espionage not only in Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Canal Zone and the Pacific Coast, but on the Atlantic Coast and the Gulf States as well."

It has become apparent, the committee said, that other nations, some of them potential enemies of the United States, "are sending increasing numbers of spies to our shores in an effort to learn our military secrets, and if possible interfere with our defense preparations." Increased numbers of aircraft disasters, attempts at sabotage, and damage done war vessels were cited as evidence of this activity and as warranting stiffer penalties.

U. S. Collects 80c on $10,000 On War Debts

By the Associated Press.

When the Government closed its war debt books last night at the end of a semi-annual installment day it found it had received 80 cents for each $10,000 due.

Only one nation, Finland, paid in full—a payment of $160,693.

One other of the 13 debtors—Hungary—paid something on account, $9,828. Rumania said it was ready to offer a settlement, but did not state its terms.

Eight nations sent their regrets, together with promises to discuss settlement at some time in the future. They were Esthonia, Great Britain, Latvia, Lithuania, Yugoslavia, Belgium, Poland and Italy.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 15.—There was "plenty of wine, women, song and Senators" at the "beauty lobby" parties young William P. Buckner, jr., gave in Washington, a witness testified in Federal court today, but one soiree bored a chic young society woman so much that she went to bed in mid-evening.

Being tried with four others on charges of mail fraud in the manipulation of Philippine railway bonds, Buckner has been accused of giving the parties in efforts to obtain legislation to advance his plans.

Like the story pert and freckled Noel Carter told yesterday, Doris (Pee Wee) Donaldson, another showgirl, testified today that she flew to Washington with Buckner after an all-night round of the supper clubs, but also, like Miss Carter, she said she had only a dim

Mead Opposes U. S. Banks to Aid Business

Control Must Be In Hands of Private Institutions, He Says

Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, author of a bill for R. F. C. insurance of long-term loans to small business, announced yesterday that he would oppose New Dealers' proposals for setting up a system of Government-operated capital credit banks to finance little businessmen.

He declared he was "adamant" in his insistence that credit aid to small business should be based on three principles, as follows:

No Government agency shall be set up to make money advances.

The Government "shall not be out a cent" on the advances.

J. H. Perkins, chairman of the board of the National City Bank of New York, meanwhile warned the Senate Banking Committee against tampering with the Nation's economic machinery by making provision for loans to incompetent concerns. "Every businessman," he said, "knows his toughest competition comes from an incompetent rival who does not know his costs. Subsidizing that kind of competition makes it harder for the businessman who is doing a good job."

The same warning note was sounded by officials of the American Bankers' Association in opposing the Mead bill at committee hearings. Robert M. Hanes, of Winston-Salem, N. C., first vice president of the association, declared the bill would serve no purpose.

Other bankers opposing the Mead bill were H. E. Cook, of Bucyrus, Ohio, president of the national bank division of the American Bankers Association, and Henry W. Koeneke, Ponca City, Okla., president of the State bank division of the association.

House Group Plans Revision Of Relief Bill

Committee to Weigh Modification Today To Forestall Attack

Facing a crossfire of opposition from urban, farm and liberal blocs, the House Appropriations Committee will meet this morning to consider modifications of the 1940 relief bill in an effort to forestall attacks from the floor.

Principal changes to be discussed by the committee include elimination of the proposed three-man administrative board for WPA and easing of the prohibition against WPA construction of buildings costing over $25,000. The $500,000 limitation on WPA projects will also be up for revision.

Although the $1,716,600,000 measure will be passed today or tomorrow without fundamental alterations, attempts will be made on the floor to increase the appropriations for WPA, PWA, NYA and FSA.

Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA administrator, followed up a visit to the White House with a press conference yesterday in which he scored the proposal to establish a three-man board for WPA as a "serious mistake."

In an agency requiring speed in operation, such as the WPA, "you get better results if one man makes all decisions," said Harrington, whose continued connection with WPA is assured by a special clause in the relief bill.

Harrington added that if the administrator fails to make the proper decisions, he should be replaced by someone else. He declared that proposed abolition of the Federal theater project would be "very unfortunate."

Some sections of the relief bill were criticized by Secretary Ickes. He said the prohibition against use of PWA funds in building plants competing with private industry was a direct blow at the PWA power development program.

Fanfare Starts Car Inspections, But Even Brown's Fails to Pass

There were a lot of red faces at yesterday's preview of the new compulsory automobile inspection service—and sunburn wasn't the reason.

The District opened its No. 1 test station at 1827 West Virginia avenue northeast to a private showing for invited guests. There was considerable fanfare with speeches and lemonade—and then the fun began.

Bigwigs in the local fields of automotive safety, traffic law enforcement and highway control drove their cars through the four-lane inspection station and with few exceptions were turned down and presented with red rejection stickers when everything was over!

One of the first cars rejected was the official auto of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police. He received a red seal—and only a few hours before, the car had come out of the District repair shop with an official O. K.

Maj. Brown was no little incensed when inspectors turned thumbs down on his car. A small crack below the beam of his right headlight proved to be the only defect. He indicated the test was too rigid and said he saw no hazard in the tiny nick in the headlamp glass.

"I'm a stickler for safety and my car was in excellent shape except for that minor defect—if it can be called a defect," he commented later. "The public will become extremely unsympathetic with the new inspection system if they continue to turn down cars for such trifles as that."

Confident airs among the dignitaries gave way to worried frowns, alarmed glances at other dignitaries and finally sputtering complaints as their cars progressed through the rigid series of tests and one by one drove away with windshields

Citizens' Unit To Reject House D. C. Income Tax

Favors Combination With Sales Tax; Overton Formula Put in Revenue Bill

By James D. Secrest.

The Citizens Advisory Committee on Taxation yesterday decided to renew its recommendation for a combined income-sales tax as outlined in the Pond report as Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, introduced his fiscal formula as an amendment to the mangled District revenue bill.

Holding its second closed meeting, the advisory committee drew up a formal report which will be submitted today to Chairman King of the Senate District Committee as its solution to the tax muddle.

The report, which was not released, is understood to have been signed by all members of the citizens group except two who were absent from both meetings—John Locher, president of the Central Labor Union, and Mrs. Ernest F. Parkinson, of the Voteless League of Women Voters.

House Version Assailed

The first part of the report attacks the House version of the income tax as full of inequities and impractical, while the second section recommends that the Senate District Committee return to the original Pond plan for a combined high-base income tax and 2 per cent retail sales levy.

The citizens committee, it is understood, seriously considered recommending renewal of the business privilege tax for another year while District officials took time to draft a new income tax, but the final decision was against it.

The original Pond plan fixed the income tax base at $14,000, but the House sub-committee lowered it to $10,000 after the United States Supreme Court ruling that States may tax the salaries of Federal employes.

The retail sales tax ran into serious opposition from the outset and was finally stricken from the House bill by the full House District Committee despite a favorable report by the Nichols sub-committee.

The Senate last session refused to consider a sales tax, and it appears doubtful that the Senate District Committee will make an effort to write it into the tax bill at this late date.

Hearings Start Next Week

Members of the advisory committee who are understood to have signed the income-sales tax recommendation are Auditor Donovan, Corporation Counsel Seal, Tax Assessor Allen, Jo V. Morgan, sole member of the board of tax appeals; Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the Public Utilities Commission; Robert V. Fleming, of the Board of Trade; L. A. Carruthers, of the Federation of Citizens Associations, and Prof. Charles Thomas, of the Federation of Civic Associations.

Chairman King has invited other members of the Senate District Committee to be present when the Commissioners submit the citizens' report to him this morning. Public hearings will start next week, he said, and all interested parties will be heard.

Senator Overton wrote in his formula for adjusting the Federal contribution on a land ratio basis as title 1 of the tax bill and struck from the measure the House provision limiting the lump-sum payment to $5,000,000.

By this maneuver Senator Overton will be able to bring his amendment to the attention of the Senate District Commitee on an equal basis with the House version of the revenue bill.

Would Provide $8,000,000

The Overton fiscal formula would give the District a lump-sum payment of 20 per cent of the general revenue fund appropriation, or approximately $8,000,000, for the next

PORTRAIT OF A GENERAL

He was born in 1879, and like most generals is in his sixtieth year as he obtains his highest command . . . Our cavalry were still chasing Indians across the plains when he was a boy, and his father used to regale him with Custer's last fight, explaining Custer's mistakes, made three years before he was born.

Gen. Marshall . . . he made it

His uncle fought in the Civil War . . . When he was 14 he was taken to the World Fair of 1893, and most fairs since then have seemed tame . . . President Cleveland was his boyhood political idol, but he regretfully switched his allegiance to McKinley when Cleveland declined to go after Hawaii and the Republic's manifest destiny. His uncle got him into the Academy.

* * * *

He was at West Point during the Spanish War, and missed it, yearning for a chance to follow Teddy Roosevelt through the Cuban underbrush . . . But he got his fill of chasing Filipinos through the Mindanao jungles for 30 months, and learned a good drinking song about civilizing the ladrones with a krag.

". . . he remembers Indian wars"

When the papers from home told about Orville and Wilbur Wright's crazy contraption that flew almost a city block, he was skeptical . . . When he got back to the States he fell in love with a girl who wore a tight tailored suit, and kept telling her that she looked like a Harrison Fisher girl, with her hair up in that high pompadour, until he married her.

* * * *

They were stuck away for three years at a dull Army post in the Middle West, and for a while he thought of resigning from the Army. It was tough going on $2,000 a year, but could he make any more elsewhere and have half as much fun? Then the boy was born and ticketed for West Point, and they became an Army family.

* * * *

At one of the Army schools he got acquainted with a Capt. George Marshall, a brilliant officer, and one Saturday afternoon he said, "George, you'll be Chief of Staff some day." . . . (He intends to remind Gen. Marshall of that some day.) . . . When he wore civvies he never really felt dressed up unless his neck was in a stiff, starched collar.

* * * *

When the war broke out in 1914 he was sent over as an observer . . . He was impressed by German efficiency, and for a while wore a little waxed mustache . . . As soon as he got home he applied for transfer to aviation, seeing great things ahead there, but they told him he was too old, and they had too many officers in aviation anyhow, more than a dozen.

". . . his first battle"

He was 38 years old when we got into the war, too old for the trenches and anyhow too valuable to waste that way . . . What with his Philippine experience and his six months as observer, he was a lieutenant-colonel before he knew it. They overloaded him with staff work for some tired generals, but he got into the thick of things once or twice.

* * * *

If the Germans hadn't caved in so suddenly in 1918 he would have come out a general, but as it was it took him 12 years for his first star. . . . He began to be one of the coming men in the Army, extra brainy, and occasionally made speeches: "We musn't underestimate the airplane, but it's the infantry that takes and holds objectives." Also: "The Army, you may be surprised to hear, is heart and soul against war."

* * * *

Just a little luck (his wife tells him) and he'd have been Chief of Staff instead of Marshall . . . Tough to miss it by an eyelash that way . . . But how many of the class of '01 ever won their stars? . . . Well, he had had plenty of Washington assignments . . . Somehow there isn't the glamour and the two-fisted patriotism there might be among the boys in high school and college . . . Hm, those radicals . . . The topic comes up occasionally at the Army and Navy Club . . . Sometimes he wishes he were just coming out of West Point . . . But who knows? Might have been worse.

Barkley Insists On Neutrality Vote This Year

Holds Report of Filibuster Threat Is 'Overestimated'

Senate Majority Leader Barkley yesterday served notice of his intention to press the neutrality issue to a vote in the Senate this session as a Senate minority round-robin with 21 signatures opposed any modification of the existing mandatory arms embargo.

Barkley said reports that Senate action on Administration neutrality recommendations will be postponed until next session "are without any foundation."

"I favor disposing of the issue before adjournment and before any foreign war develops, and intend to do my utmost to obtain a Senate vote this session," said the Senate majority leader.

Scorns Filibuster Report

A bill embodying Secretary of State Hull's recommendations for repeal of the wartime arms embargo, opening American markets to belligerents who acquire title to goods before shipment, and regulating American travel in combat zones established by the President, already has been approved by a House committee and the House is expected to act within the next fortnight.

A divided Senate Foreign Relations Committee Wednesday agreed to consider all neutrality proposals "until disposed of" beginning June 21.

Barkley's announcement of his intentions to press for a Senate vote followed publication of excerpts from the "declaration of principles" being circulated among mandatory neutrality bloc Senators opposing arms embargo repeal. Barkley said he thought reports of a threatened filibuster "greatly overestimated." He said he doubted if there were many of the 21 round robin signers who would countenance a filibuster.

Restriction Denied

"To maintain the arms embargo is in no sense a restriction or limitation upon any constitutional power belonging to the executive," said the round robin, reportedly signed by Senators Nye (Republican), of North Dakota; Clark (Democrat), of Missouri; Bone (Democrat), of Washington, and 18 other Senators.

The statement said "the United States can ill afford to place itself in the unbecoming light of a nation persisting in the talk about detesting war while at the same time scheming to get profit from the wars of other nations, furnishing the instrumentalities and munitions by which they may carry forward war."

It was reported that neither Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, or Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, had as yet signed the statement. Johnson was expected to sign it, adding a supplementary statement. Borah, whose sympathies lie with the group, said the issue should be thoroughly discussed in the Senate and "judging by the past, if we undertake to dispose of this legislation we will be here until September."

A judiciary sub-committee, headed by Senator Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, meanwhile reported to the full committee without recommendation a resolution to require a referendum before war could be declared, except in case of a threatened attack on the United States, its possessions, or a nation of the Western Hemisphere.

The Gallup Poll

Boycott of Japan and War Materials Embargo Favored as Sympathy for China Increases

Some Believe Plan Also Would Help Domestic Trade

By Dr. George Gallup,
American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, June 15.—American public sympathy for China in her war against Japan has increased sharply in the past year and a half. Today an overwhelming majority of voters favor a boycott of Japanese goods and an embargo on the shipment of American war materials to Japan.

These trends of public opinion are revealed in a survey in which interviewers for the American Institute of Public Opinion talked to thousands of typical citizens throughout the union, asking their views on the two-year-old conflict in Asia. Those questioned represent a cross-section of the national population—a miniature public selected by the same methods used by the institute in forecasting more than six elections in the last year with an average error of less than 3 per cent.

The growing American sympathy for the Chinese cause is shown by comparing the results of the present study with the results of surveys taken in 1937 on the same questions. At that time there was considerably more sympathy for China than for Japan, but the largest single group of voters—over half—said their sympathies did not lie with either side. Today's survey finds a marked decline in this "neutral" sentiment and a corresponding rise in sympathy for the Chinese.

"In the present fight between Japan and China, are your sympathies with either side?"

	Sept., 1937	Today
Japan	2%	2%
China	47	74
Neither	51	24

This change in public attitude, which is growing less and less neutral toward the Oriental war, parallels a change in attitude toward Europe. Institute studies have traced the rise of American sympathy for England and France in the last year and the growth of sentiment for giving aid in the form of war materials to those countries in time of war. In the case of the conflict in Asia there has apparently been a similar change in attitude—a growing desire to give aid to the country with which the majority of voters sympathize.

Whereas two years ago a boycott of Japanese goods was opposed by the majority, today more than six voters in every 10 say they would join a movement to stop buying goods made in Japan.

"Would you join a movement in this country to stop buying goods made in Japan?"

	Yes	No
Oct., 1937	37%	63%
Today	66	34

Voters 2 to 1 For Embargo

Public sympathy for China also expreses itself in another way—through a favorable vote on embargoing the shipment of war materials to Japan. This proposal was suggested recently by Senator Key Pittman. It is significant to note that while the majority of voters think war shipments to Japan should stop, they believe arms shipments to China should continue.

"Do you think the United States should forbid shipment of arms or ammunition from this country to Japan?"

Yes	72%
No	28

"Do you think the United States should forbid shipment of arms or ammunition from this country to China?"

Yes	40%
No	60

The underlying explanation for the public's present attitude toward Japan is shown in the reasons which voters give for their opinion. The chief reason is that "Japan is the aggressor," or, as one voter puts it, "the Japanese invaded a peaceful nation and we shouldn't help them out."

Many voters also take the position that a boycott of Japanese goods would not only hasten the end of the war, but would "keep Japanese competition out of the United States and help us build up domestic industries."

Silver Bloc Asks Currency Expansion

Senate Drive Launched; Enough Votes Claimed To Force Adoption

By International News Service.

Crashing into the muddled Congressional adjournment picture, the Senate silver bloc yesterday suddenly launched a battle for currency expansion and served notice they will release a barrage on the Senate floor Monday, when the bill to extend President Roosevelt's monetary powers is considered.

Senators Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, and Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, opened the attack yesterday, being quickly joined by Senator Henry F. Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona. Today the inflation forces will hold a strategy meeting.

Claiming enough Senate votes already pledged to force adoption of their program, silver-haired Thomas was joined by the fiery McCarran in introducing a substitute for the House-passed monetary bill, to provide:

Transfer of $1,500,000,000 from the foreign exchange stabilization fund, leaving in it $500,000,000. To the $1,500,000,000 would be added $500,000,000 of "free" gold in the Federal Treasury. The $2,000,000,000 total would be used as a basis for currency to pay governmental expenses.

Silver at $1.04 an Ounce

Directions to the Treasury Department to buy domestically mined silver at $1.04 an ounce as a currency base, instead of at the present rate of 64.64 cents an ounce.

Authority for the Treasury Department to accept foreign-mined silver in payment of American-grown commodities such as wheat and cotton, at 25 per cent above the world price of silver, which is about 43 cents an ounce.

A mandate for the Federal Reserve Board to beat down the purchasing power of the dollar from its present $1.32 to $1.00 or the 1926 level and to stabilize it at that level.

Provisions in the House-passed bill to extend from June 30 to June 30, 1941, the President's power to alter the gold content of the dollar and to issue up to $3,000,000,000 in greenbacks, would be included in the substitute bill; also, a requirement that the Treasury Department annually submit an audit of the foreign exchange stabilization fund.

With the provision to extend the President's authority to change the weight of the dollar already under bombardment by a Republican-Democrat coalition led by Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, a free-for-all fight over money was definitely foreshadowed.

Dr. Smith Asks Vindication, Right to Quit

Girls' Training School Head Denies All Charges at Hearing

Denying all charges that led to her dismissal as superintendent of the National Training School for Girls, Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith yesterday asked the commissioners to exonerate her regime and to change her separation from the institution from "dismissal with prejudice to a resignation without prejudice."

Her request followed immediately after a surprise request by Frederick W. McReynolds, chairman of the Board of Public Welfare, that board's original recommendation on the dismissal be upheld by the commissioners.

Dr. Smith had intended to ask for vindication Monday when the "prosecution" also will have an opportunity to sum up the entire case. Both Dr. Smith and Oliver Gasch, assistant corporation counsel, who has acted as "prosecutor" during the three weeks of public hearings, will be given 45 minutes each to complete the case at that time. The final hearing will begin at 10:30 a. m. in the District Building board room.

Says Action Justified

McReynolds said that he had not been authorized by the board to make the request but that he felt the "Board of Public Welfare had been put on trial" at the hearings.

"I have listened to the testimony and read about it and on behalf of the board I request a finding that the Board of Public Welfare was not only justified in recommending the dismissal but it would have been derelict in its duty if it had failed to do so," he said.

The charges which were brought out during the hearing included failure to co-operate in control of venereal disease; failure to take any action to abate the immorality known to exist in the school; allowing girls to leave school without sanction of the Board of Public Welfare and general waste and extravagance.

She said when she first came to work at the school in February, 1938, she prepared a statement outlining her policy with regard to girls infected with venereal diseases.

"This was completely ignored by the board who proceeded to make their own policy during my absence," she said.

Charges that she permitted girls, without consent from the board, to accept employment although they were infected, were vigorously denied.

"As far as sending infected girls into private homes to work as domestics by the day was done with the knowledge of Mr. Street (former welfare director)," she testified adorned by the red insignia of rejection.

Everyone was pretty sure his or her car would pass with flying colors when the ceremonies first began. There was much laughter and fun-poking at the first few who failed to pass. But that soon died down when the tables were turned.

Less than half of the 60 cars inspected in the hour drove away with the green O. K. sticker. Thirty-seven were turned down, the majority for bad headlights, a few for bad brakes and the rest for minor defects.

The list of rejections included names of the cream of Washington's traffic safety society. Here are a few who didn't make the grade and must return for another going over:

Whitney Leary, chairman of the Traffic Advisory Council; Harry Wender, chairman, safety committee, Federation of Citizens Associations; George Keneipp, manager, Keystone Automobile Club; Mark Lansburgh, member, Keystone Automobile Club advisory board; Mrs. George Thorpe, chairman, women's safety committee, American Automobile Association.

Loudest complaints among the rejected car owners were directed at their private garages. Many said they had spent large sums to place their vehicles in A No. 1 shape.

Commissioner Hazen's car was the first one through the inspection lanes. It passed in all particulars, as did the autos of Commissioner McCoach and Coroner MacDonald.

Public inspections begin Monday. Between 400 and 500 cars a day will be tested. Those who receive red stickers must return within ten days for a recheck. The green seals are good for the balance of the year.

Soviet Rejection of Mendelian Law of Genetics Called 'Absurd' by Editor of Science Journal

Robert C. Cook, managing editor of the Journal of Heredity, locally published organ of the American Genetic Association, yesterday deprecated Russia's reported intention of "repealing" the Mendelian law, which is the foundation of genetics.

"The Soviets have pushed research on heredity remarkably," said Cook, whose office is in the Victor Building, "but the idea of throwing the Mendelian gene out the window because it does not agree with Marxian 'dialectical materialism' is absurd."

The New York Times yesterday carried a report from Moscow that Socialist Agriculture, official organ of the Commissariat of Agriculture, had published a denunciation of the classical concept of genetics.

Although the denunciation was made merely by 24 students of the Timiryazeff Agricultural Academy, the fact it was published by a Soviet government organ gives it an official note.

Cook predicted that Prof. N. I. Vaviloff, who is stanchly faithful to Mendel's teachings, won't be permitted to leave Russia to preside over the Seventh International Congress of Genetics scheduled to be held in Edinburgh in August because of his unwillingness to taint science with politics.

The congress originally was to have been held in Moscow in 1936 but was "postponed," then canceled.

Vaviloff, who has many friends in Washington, apparently has incurred the Soviet's disfavor, and Prof. T. D. Lysenko, a plant breeder, is in the good graces of the government because his theory that plants can be "re-educated" and "redirected" is held to be more compatible with Marxism.

Paper Mill Chiefs Elect Officers

A three-day convention of the American Pulp and Paper Mill Superintendents Association ended yesterday with election of new officers and a dinner dance at the Mayflower Hotel.

Howard H. Harrison, of Middletown, Ohio, was elected president, succeeding F. L. Zellers, of Niles, Mich.

Other officers chosen were A. B. C. Drew, of Middletown, Ohio; Oscar Stamets, Riggsville, N. J.; Grover Keeth, Rothschild, Wis.; L. S. McCarthy, Port Townsend, Wash., and Ivar Ekholm, Berlin, N. H., vice presidents.

'Wine, Women, Senators' at Lobby Parties

2d Showgirl Vague But Society Matron Remembers Boredom

"Did you meet any Congressmen while you were in Washington?" Assistant U. S. Attorney William P. Maloney asked her.

"I don't think so," said the slender, brunette witness, adding that she did not stay overnight but came back to her job in a night club here.

Not so Mrs. John E. Schurman, a graduate of the exclusive Bennett School, wife of a Yale man and daughter of a well-known real estate operator. She remembered much—even the name of the wine served—but most of all that she was tired and bored with Buckner's party.

She and her husband ran into Buckner, whom she had known since college days, in 1937, she said, and Buckner invited them down to Washington for a dinner party at the Carlton Hotel.

Saying that her father was treasurer of Tammany Hall "years ago," she said "perhaps" she had heard Buckner remark that he wanted to meet some Tammany members of Congress.

Senators Named

"Were there any Senators or Congressmen there?" she was asked.

"Yes, Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, and Congressman Lanzetta (Democrat), of New York."

Asked whether she had gone to bed early because she was tired, Mrs. Schurman said, "yes, and I was bored."

"Which one of the Congressmen bored you?" Maloney asked jestingly. Mrs. Schurman did not reply.

George Edgar Biddle, another witness not otherwise identified, nervously testified that he went with "Pee Wee," Buckner and William J. Gillespie, a co-defendant, to Washington.

A "big party" which he attended at Buckner's invitation was described by Lee S. Walden, banker of London, Ont., and member of a Philippine railway bondholders' protective committee headed by Buckner. It was Walden who told of "plenty of wine, women, song and Senators." Later, he added, he had lunch with Senator Walsh in the Senate restaurant.

Objections Raised

"Was anything mentioned about the Philippine Railways?" Maloney asked.

"No, Senator Walsh had some sort of fight on his hands."

Repeated objections to mention of the amount of liquor consumed at Buckner's parties was met by Maloney with the remark, "I think it's about time that the bondholders found out what happened to their money."

Maloney has charged that Buckner and Gillespie, once "dead broke," went on a "drunken orgy" with money they collected from bondholders for a campaign to have the Philippine Government redeem the defaulted securities.

Others on trial are Felipe Buencamino, Filipino legislative leader; Capt. John Stuart Hyde, British actor and aviator; and C. Wesley Turner, broker.

Winkler Disapproves

Previously Dr. Frank Winkler, broker, city college professor and former member of Buckner's bondholders' protective committee, was asked, "Did you see anything wrong or sinister in buying a Congressman a drink in a transaction of this sort?"

He replied, "I know very little about legislative processes. If I had known, however, that the committee's funds were being used for champagne parties and the transportation of showgirls, I would have disapproved."

Dr. Winkler added that he resigned from the committee in 1937 when he became "suspicious" of Buckner's activities.

Never Picked Up Check

Mrs. Schurman testified that she and her husband never picked up the check at any of several parties they attended with Buckner and Gillespie before and after the "Congressional party." She understood Buckner was a member of a wealthy family, she explained, and so never questioned his ability to pay.

Miss Donaldson, too, said her trip to Washington was preceded by visits to a night club and a restaurant, during which she and her companions had several drinks. After she reached home, Buckner called her about 8 o'clock in the morning, she said, and suggested a "hop" to Washington.

"Do you often sit up late at night?" Maloney asked, when she told of returning to New York to make her appearance in the first show at Ben Marden's Riviera, nearby in New Jersey.

"Yes, but not too late," Miss Donaldson quipped.

Earlier, Donald T. Peyser, attorney for Dr. Winkler, testified that Buckner in a telephone conversation "threatened to punch me in the nose when he met me."

Peyser said he had told Buckner that Winkler maintained that Buckner had no authority to solicit funds on behalf of the bondholders' committee. Buckner replied that he had raised "very little" money, Peyser said.

Buckner once said that he "had an offer for the bonds from a Japanese group, but turned it down because of the strategic military importance of the railroad," Peyser said.

In July of 1937, Dr. Winkler said, he informed Buckner that he "was opposed to the solicitation of funds (for expenses) unless or until bonds could be deposited to secure such a loan."

Informed in July, 1937, of a letter signed with Buckner's name soliciting funds for expenses from bondholders, Dr. Winkler said, he complained to Buckner, but the young promoter denied that he had sent such a letter.

A form letter signed with Buckner's name and urging "aggressive action" to "impress Government officials and the press" and a letter from Winkler to Buckner were offered in evidence.

Having failed to get Buckner to call a meeting of the bondholders' committee, Winkler said, he resigned October 26 or 28, 1937.

3 Contracts Let For Arlington Bridge Repairs

Award of three contracts for improvements to Arlington Memorial Bridge was announced yesterday by the office of National Capital Parks. Work under a fourth contract, calling for cleaning and repointing of granite at the memorial entrance to Arlington National Cemetery, was begun yesterday.

The three contracts, which provide for painting and paving of the draw span in the center of the bridge and installation of an electrical heating system in the west abutment's engine room, are at an aggregate cost of $27,000.

The memorial span will be closed to vehicular traffic a part of the time while the work is under way

Chamberlain In Touch With U.S. and France

Tells Commons Japan Also Perils Interests Of Other Powers

By the Associated Press.

London, June 15.—Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today that Great Britain, France and the United States were keeping in closest touch on the Tientsin situation as a result of Japanese statements interpreted as a general threat to foreign interests in China.

So far neither the United States nor France has been affected seriously by the Japanese blockade of the British and French concessions in the North China port.

British Ambassador Sir Robert Craigie in Tokyo made full representations to the Japanese Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Chamberlain said Sir Robert was instructed to point out "the danger of provocative action by the Japanese which might lead to regrettable incidents."

Other Powers Concerned

The prime minister, however, quoted a Japanese spokesman at Tientsin as saying the real object of the blockade was to obtain "a wider form of co-operation from British authorities in China."

This, he said, "would raise important questions of policy in which other great powers are concerned no less than this country and the closest touch is being maintained with the French and United States governments."

He did not elaborate on this nor would he state what action Britain was considering as a reply to the blockade which went into effect Wednesday.

He said it was clear that if the statements the Japanese spokesman in Tientsin "represents the views of authorities in Tokyo, the Japanese are using the incident to make demands wider and more far-reaching than the handing over of the four men."

Chamberlain thus referred to Japan's earlier demand for delivery to Japanese authorities of four Chinese accused of killing a Tientsin official and now detained in the British concession. British rejection of this demand led to the blockade.

Three suggestions for action were made by members of the House of Commons:

Denunciation of the British-Japanese trade agreement, which grants Japan most favored nation treatment.

Summoning of a special meeting of the League of Nations Council to consider possible steps.

Invocation of article 7 of the Nine-Power Treaty, which provides for full consultation among all signatory powers when a situation arises contrary to principles of the pact.

It was known, however, that the board of trade was studying the possibility of economic reprisals which official circles regarded as the most likely form of action.

Among other developments in Commons today was the announcement the government would set up a skeleton propaganda ministry to operate in peacetime as the foreign publicity department, and an announcement that a bill to limit arms profits would be introduced next Monday.

Yarnell's Moves Unreported

Hull said he was without information on reports that Admiral Harry Yarnell, commander of the American Asiatic squadron, was en route to Tientsin. Yarnell, he admitted, could have taken the action on his own initiative.

No dispatches have yet come to the State Department indicating that Americans are suffering personally, through lack of food and other necessities.

Official dispatches were lacking on the blockade the Japanese are also reported to have declared at the International Settlement at Kulangsu, Amoy, where the 42 American bluejackets were landed last month, along with equal numbers of British and French bluejackets, after the Japanese had landed forces there. The forces of the four nations are still there.

Hull Confers With Advisers

By International News Service.

Secretary of State Hull held a lengthy conference with his chief advisers on foreign affairs yesterday on the critical Far Eastern situation resulting from Japan's blockade of the British concession at Tientsin, China.

Attending the conference were Joseph C. Grew, Ambassador to Japan, home on leave, who talked with President Roosevelt yesterday; Ambassador to France, William C. Bullitt, also home on vacation; Maxwell C. Hamilton, chief of the division of Eastern affairs, and Jay Pierrepont Moffatt, chief of the division of European affairs.

All declined to discuss the conference later, but it was understood no action would be taken pending receipt of further reports from Tokyo, where, it was reported, the Anglo-Soviet "peace front" negotiations underway in Moscow.

A Foreign Office source in Tokyo warned that any British retaliation would only increase the gravity of the situation. Many Japanese said they regarded the talk of reprisals as "A mere British bluff." Prince Kotohito Kanin, Marshal and chief of staff of the Japanese army, the War Minister Gen. Seishiro Itagaki consulted with Emperor Hirohito.

A Japanese spokesman said the United States and French consuls general in Tientsin had been assured that their interests would be "protected," although a blockade prevailed against the French concession as the only means of making the blockade o. the adjoining British area effective.

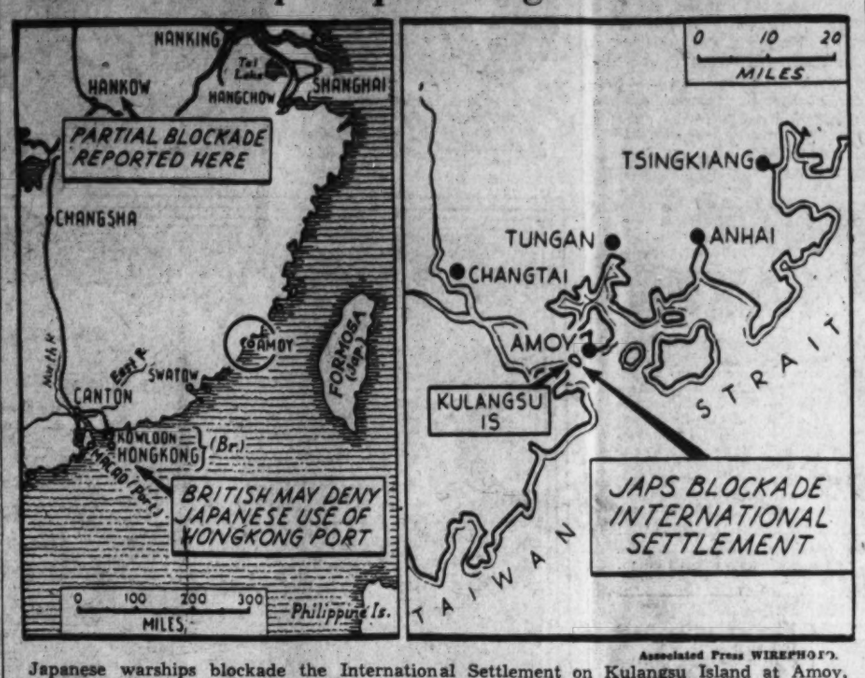
The Japanese newspaper Asahi in Tokyo lent credence to speculation linking the blockades with the Anglo-French-Soviet "peace front" negotiations by asserting that "the whole world knows that Britain and Russia are plotting against Japan, the question therefore relates entirely to Britain's attitude toward Japan and the concession issue becomes of minor importance."

The blockade of the British and French concessions here was almost airtight.

Japanese sources said authorities had decided after a conference to continue isolating the concessions "until Great Britain corrects its pro-Chinese attitude," stops supporting Chinese Nationalist Generalissimo Chiang and refuses to let Chiang's terrorists use British-controlled areas as bases for anti-Japanese activity.

In an effort to escape the blockade, the American Standard Oil Co., the Texas Co., and the British Asiatic Petroleum Co. moved their offices from the concession into the former Russian concession, which now is Japanese-controlled.

Japan Tightens Blockade on Tientsin After Food Ships Slip Through Guards



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Japanese warships blockade the International Settlement on Kulangsu Island at Amoy, China, and have a partial blockade in force at Hankow (both shown on map). It was suggested in London that Japanese be denied use of British ports of Honkong (on map at left).

were ominously quiet and the Japanese tanks remained at their posts.

There were increasing indications that Japan's demands for greater power in China bore a close connection with the tension in Europe and many diplomats professed to see in the Japanese blockades a "squeeze play" against the western powers by the allies of the anti-Comitern pact—Japan, Germany and Italy.

The French feared that the totalitarians might be trying to divert the attention of Great Britain and France from developments believed brewing in Europe.

The Japanese military leaders, explaining the use of additional troops in the Tientsin blockade and extension of "punitive measures" to Amoy, said stern action was necessitated "in view of the mysterious bellicosity manifested by the British."

Developments included:

Kulangsu, the foreign area of Amoy, about 900 miles south of Tientsin, faced a serious food shortage when the Japanese clamped on a blockade there without warning in enforcement of a demand for reorganization of the Kulangsu municipal council, giving it Japanese domination. Kulangsu is an island just off the port of Amoy.

Steamer Runs Blockade

A British steamer of the Asiatic Petroleum Co., the Yan Tai Shan, ran the gantlet of Japanese warships blockading Kulangsu with food supplies. The Japanese threatened "immediate action" against the ship.

The British and French ambassadors in Tokyo delivered a protest to the Japanese foreign office, disputing Japan's contention that she has a right to assume sovereignty over all the foreign concessions in China. The protest was parallel to United States representations of last week, defying the right of any foreign power to interfere with the administration of the foreign areas in China.

British Prime Minister Chamberlain announced in Commons that the British ambassador to Tokyo, Sir Robert L. Craigie, had warned the Japanese government of "the danger that any provocative action by the Japanese might lead to regrettable incidents." Chamberlain failed to say whether Britain would take reprisals—such as a possible denunciation of the 1911 Anglo-Japanese Trade Treaty—but retaliatory measures were known to be under consideration.

Britain was in almost constant consultation with the United States and France in readiness for possible joint action.

The Japanese Ambassador to Rome, Toshio Shiratori, conferred in Berlin with Gen. Hiroshi Oshima, Japan's ambassador there, regarding Japan's possible adherence to the new Italio-German military alliance. Both envoys were said to favor a military alliance with the Rome-Berlin axis.

Australia Buys $4,270,870 of U. S. War Planes

Export licenses for the shipment to Australia of war planes costing $4,270,870 were issued in May, the State Department disclosed yesterday.

The British dominion, hurriedly building up its defenses because of Japanese activities in the Far East, was second only to France in purchases of American planes and other arms.

The National Munitions Control Board issued licenses for the export of arms, chiefly war planes, to France, costing $9,493,683.

The month's total of $17,916,996 brought the total for the first five months of 1939 to $54,826,965.

De Koven Slayer To Die Tomorrow

Paris, June 15 (U.P.).—Eugene Weidmann, 31-year-old German bluebeard, today was ordered beheaded Saturday for the murders of 22-year-old Jean De Koven and five other persons after a last-minute gesture of remorse that saved his accomplice from death.

The killer, who boasted how "my fascinating eyes" lured Miss De Koven, Brooklyn dancer, to a death by garroting, was informed tonight that he had only 36 hours before his head is chopped off outside the walls of Versailles prison.

Franco Plan to Buy Cotton Here Debated

By International News Service.

Administration financial chiefs yesterday engaged in a controversy over the new Spanish government's proposal to buy 300,000 bales of surplus American cotton through Reconstruction Finance Corporation credit.

While RFC Chairman Jones was reported ready to consider the proposition, Secretary Morgenthau and Chairman Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board, contended the $14,500,000 suit of the Franco government against the United States for buying silver from the previous government should be settled first.

Slovakia Warns She Will Resist Loss of Liberty

Bratislava, Slovakia, June 15 (INS).—Slovakian Foreign Minister Ferdinand Durcansky tonight served defiant warning on this country's big neighbors that any attempt to destroy Slovak independence would encounter the resistance of a united people.

Durcansky declared:

"Everyone in Slovakia is convinced that our nation could live only as an independent state.

"Anyone who is thinking of touching the independence of Slovakia should be aware that he is facing a united nation which prefers death to the deprivation of its freedom."

Bates Prepares Milk-Control Plan for D. C.

Proposal Provides For Board With Triple Representation

Chairman Bates of the House subcommittee which conducted the District milk inquiry today will submit to his colleagues a legislative proposal to set up a local milk commission and a report on the investigation prepared by himself and J. Edward Burroughs, committee counsel.

While adhering to his original plan for triple representation on the regulatory commission, Bates said the bill now provides for two representatives of the consumers, two for the producers, and one for the distributors.

The health officer will be an ex-officio member of the commission and will be the final authority in all matters relating to public health.

The commission will be vested with broad regulatory powers and will have authority to fix the prices paid dairy farmers and the prices charged consumers.

Shafer Submits Bill

If the commission finds it advisable after an investigation, Bates said, it will be empowered to alter the District regulations so as to permit the legal importation of cream and milk from outside the Washington milkshed.

Bates' disclosure of the details of his milk commission bill was made after Representative Shafer (Republican), Michigan, one of the subcommittee members, introduced a milk-control bill drafted by Dr. Frederick C. Howe, former consumers' counsel of the Agriculture Department.

The Shafer measure, which probably will be discussed at today's closed sub-committee meeting, authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to make an investigation of dairy production areas and report its recommendations to the District Commissioners before January 1, 1940.

The report would recommend regulations as to the production, distribution and sale of milk in the District. The investigation would be made with the co-operation of the United States Public Health Service.

Hearings Provided

Upon receiving the report, the bill provides the Commissioners must hold public hearings and then decide whether or not to adopt them in whole or in part. A similar procedure would be followed every six months.

The Shafer bill gives the Commissioners broad powers in proscribing methods of transportation, distribution and sale of milk in the District, even to the designation of milk caps.

Licenses would be required of all producers and distributors, and the District heads would be empowered to revoke the license of anyone found guilty of engaging in monopolistic practices or interfering with the "free flow of milk" from producer to consumer.

One section of the bill makes provision for its adaptation by any community in the United States with only minor amendments as to the title of the regulatory body.

Battle Expected

A spirited intracommittee battle is expected when the committee meets this morning, and it is likely that majority and minority reports will be submitted to the House District Committee as a result of the divergence of opinion.

Members of the subcommittee who will vote, besides the chairman, are Representatives Byron, of Maryland; Schulte, of Indiana, and Tenerowicz, of Michigan, Democrats, and Shafer, of Michigan; Sondager, of Rhode Island, and Vreeland, of New Jersey, Republicans.

Chairman Randolph of the full committee and Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, are ex-officio members of the subcommittee with no voting power.

Urges Investment Of Social Funds

By the Associated Press.

A businessman suggested to the Senate Finance Committee yesterday that the Government invest some of its billions from social security taxes in the securities of industry and business. The entire fund now is invested in Federal bonds.

The witness, who discussed proposed amendments to the social security law, was Jay Iglauer, Cleveland department store executive and chairman of the taxation committee of the National Retail Dry Goods Association.

Many aspects of the Social Security System, he said, were similar to private insurance programs, and he suggested that funds collected in taxes be placed in the hands of trustees for investment.

"Part of the money," he said, "could go into Government bonds, just as does the money of private companies; part could go into self-liquidating public projects and part into real estate, transportation and industrial bonds.

"The latter would produce an income to Government from industry itself. Now the income comes only from taxes, which is turned over as interest on Government bonds."

Iglauer said such a system would have a stabilizing effect on business, because if a depression occurred the Government would not be forced to liquidate its private holdings hurriedly.

Advisory Unit Urges Income, 2% Sales Taxes

Favors Pond Plan; Overton Formula Put In D. C. Revenue Bill

fiscal year. This $3,000,000 revenue increase, were it adopted, would obviate the necessity for an income tax, but Senator Overton did not eliminate the income levy in the amended bill that he introduced.

Senator Ellender ((Democrat), of Louisiana, yesterday joined the list of Senators who are objecting to the application of the income tax to Government employes as tax experts at the District Building discovered that the omission of the word "not" in the House bill exempts all persons who have voting residences in the States.

While District officials were inclined to believe the omission an error, one of the experts who helped draft the measure said it had been left out purposely upon instruction from Chairman Nichols, of the fiscal affairs subcommittee of the House. Nichols could not be reached.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, a member of the subcommittee, expressed the opinion, however, that the omission was "an oversight," and stated it should be remedied by the Senate.

Federal Workers Indorse Tax

It was recalled that the income tax proposed by the subcommittee, however, began at a $10,000 base and consequently would not have affected the vast majority of Government employes had the base not been lowered to $2,000 by the House.

Letters pro and con in the income tax squabble continued to pour into the office of Senator King.

The United Federal Workers of America indorsed the income tax, but suggested that modifications should be made to allow deductions for dependents and to ease the burden on the lower-salaried brackets.

"You may believe that Federal employes object to an income tax," Jacob Baker wrote upon behalf of the organization.

"As a matter of fact, the view of our organization is that this is a much fairer tax than any of the sales, transaction, or business privilege taxes proposed or heretofore in effect."

The Voteless League of Women Voters meanwhile addressed a letter to the chairmen of the Senate and House conferees on the District appropriations bill and urged acceptance of the $7,750,000 lump-sum payment voted by the Senate. The letter also indorsed the Overton fiscal formula as a permanent policy of fiscal relations between the Federal and District governments.

'Young Mr. Lincoln' Is Superb Character Study

Henry Fonda Triumphs in Title Role; 'Juarez' and 'Mikado' Continue Runs; Jottings of the Week-End Theater

"YOUNG MR. LINCOLN." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of an original screen play by Lamar Trotti, starring Henry Fonda, with Alice Brady, Marjorie Weaver, Arleen Whelan, Eddie Collins, Pauline Moore, Richard Cromwell, Donald Meek, Dorris Bowdon, Eddie Quillan, Spencer Charters, Ward Bond, Milburn Stone, Cliff Clark, Charles Tannen, Frances Ford, Fred Kohler jr., Kay Linaker, Russell Simpson, Edwin Maxwell, Robert Homans, Jack Kelly and Dickie Jones. Directed by John Ford. Reviewed Thursday afternoon. At Loew's Palace Theater.

"Young Mr. Lincoln," revealed to Washington for the first time on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater yesterday, as all of its advance notices have proclaimed, is a superlative picture.

This Twentieth Century-Fox production, starring Henry Fonda in the title role, makes no attempt to trace the complete youth of Lincoln or to indicate the political turmoil in which he became involved. It deals only sketchily and in most vague manner with his love for Ann Rutledge and his wooing of Mary Todd—of vice versa—is not even touched upon. Stephen A. Douglas is her beau throughout the action of the picture. Only by implication and a nebulous, but still discernible, sort of directorial symbolism is the future greatness of the man brought into the simple events that form the complete structure of the drama that is unfolded upon the screen.

BELL

"Young Mr. Lincoln" is a direct and illuminating character study, centering its chief interest in a single incident in Lincoln's early life as a lawyer in Springfield, Ill.—the winning of his first big case in court, the "moonlight murder" case in which Matt and Adam Clay are accused of killing "Scrub" White. In its revelation of the character and acumen of the young jackleg lawyer, the film play contrived by Lamar Trotti reaches the peak of its power in the trial scenes. All that goes before is atmospheric and in the nature of embroidery of the major purpose of the play.

We meet Lincoln first as a young storekeeper in New Salem, Ill., in 1832. The Clay family comes along to settle in the neighborhood and swap a barrel of "trash" for some needed stores. In the "trash" is a copy of Blackstone's Commentaries—and the young rail-splitter is on his way to the law. He moves to Springfield and hangs out his shingle. But the Fourth of July celebrations engage more of his interest than his office and he closes shop to take part in the tug-of-war, rail-splitting contest, to judge a pie-baking contest and, that night, to become involved in the tragic happenings that were to bring him his first fame. The remainder of the picture is devoted to the trial.

Omits Outworn Incident

"Young Mr. Lincoln," it seems to me, is unique in that it omits all aspects of Abraham Lincoln's early life in New Salem and Springfield that have been dwelt upon in other dramas based on the life of the Great American. It is fresh, intelligent and moving and captures what most of us believe to have been the true spirit of the young Lincoln. The drama disclosed here is kindly, mildly prophetic and completely engrossing.

This is due in largest measure to two factors—the extraordinarily fine performance contributed to the picture by Henry Fonda and the unerring direction of John Ford.

Fonda not only looks strikingly like a youthful Lincoln, but has the voice, manner of speech and gangling walk to fulfill every mental conception of the raw-boned young attorney who had not yet found himself. It will be many a day, one fears, before Mr. Fonda has opportunity to do anything half so fine. John Ford's direction is completely in the spirit and the mood of the subject matter with which his drama deals. As I have said, there is a certain amount of faint symbolism in certain of the scenes, but the director, like the author, has been content to make vivid a single episode in the life of a man who later was to struggle with crushing problems.

Supporting Cast Excels

The supporting cast has been chosen with exceptional discretion. Alice Brady, the wordless backwoods woman, whose sons stand in the shadow of the gallows, gives a poignant and memorable portrayal of anguished motherhood. Richard Cromwell and Eddie Quillan are grimly effective as her sons. Donald Meek as the prosecuting attorney, offers the finest characterization he ever has brought to the silver sheet and Spencer Charters, as the presiding judge, lends further variety to a gallery of sterling portraitures. Arleen Whelan, Marjorie Weaver, Eddie Collins, Ward Bond, Fred Kohler, jr., Milburn Stone, as Stephen A. Douglas, a distinctly minor character in the play; Dorris Bowdon and Cliff Clark, as the sheriff, all have a part in shaping the excellence of a play of rounded perfection.

"Young Mr. Lincoln" is unlike any other Lincoln play ever presented before the public. It would be worth seeing for that alone, even if it were not so flawlessly done.

Variety is lent the new bill at the Palace by a variegated array of short subjects. Pete Smith expatiates both humorously and informatively upon the subject of "Radio Hams," those amateur broadcasters who sometimes render such valuable service in times of emergency, and a color cartoon discloses horrendous events under the title of "Art Gallery," innocuous as that may sound. It is Nero who starts all the trouble by coming to life on his pedestal and wanting to burn "Rome," the painting that hangs immediately behind him. Those three little "no evil" monkeys furnish the matches and what happens after that will singe your hair. An unusually long and complete "News of the Day" completes a program that is enthusiastically and unequivocally recommended.

So what amounts practically to an avalanche of last minute changes of managerial minds sweeps across the drama desk while we are out looking at "Young Mr. Lincoln."

Although it was cryptically presaged by that "now playing" ad in yesterday's papers, it was not until yesterday afternoon that the Warner executives definitely announced that "Juarez," starring Paul Muni, Bette Davis and Brian Aherne — Mr. Aherne, strictly, is not starred, but should be—will be held over a second week at the Earle. This is merited recognition of the worth of one of the most impressive film plays of the season. The stage bill also is being held over intact. This sets back the engagement of Dick Powell, Gale Page and Ann Sheridan in "Naughty But Nice" one week.

And hot on the heels of that comes a wire from Manager Hardie Meakin of RKO-Keith's to the effect that customer demand for its continuance is so insistent that he has no alternative but to continue Universal's Technicolor production of Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Mikado" through a third week. Here again the supplementary attractions will be preserved en toto.

And that's the way it goes in the life of a drayma editor—just one darn thing after another. Show business.

Sidney B. Lust, prominent independent motion-picture exhibitor, is plannnig an ambitious series of "flesh" entertainments at the Boro Theater, out Bethesda way, to augment the regular screen programs. It begins tonight with Harry Berry's "Sunkist Vanities," a 17-person vaudeville unit, boasting ten acts and a girls' band. The Berry show will be presented twice nightly, at 7:15 and 9:30. In the near future the Boro will present the Cabin Kids, the clever pickaninnies who appeared in the motion picture, "Mississippi." So now you know.

as the hard-boiled flying-field manager and the showgirl, in Howard Hawks' production of "Only Angels Have Wings," a stirring tale of aviaton, love and bitter rivalries in the Andes. The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, June 15.

CHALLENGE: The producers of the "Information, Please" program have been anxious to have, as a guest expert, Herbert Bayard Swope, one of the most informed men in America. Swope's friends have cautioned him that if he agrees to the broadcast he's liable to be "framed"—by being asked tricky and fantastic questions. "Information, Please," therefore, is planning to arrange an off-the-record quiz program at which they'll back John Kieran against Swope . . . The wise money will be on Swope, in whose honor quiz books have been dedicated . . . Edwina Hecht, daughter of Ben Hecht, had a date last week with Herbert Bayard Swope, jr. The young man's father entertained her while his son was upstairs. "Tell me," he asked Edwina, "do YOU know when the Magna Charta was signed?"

CHANGE: The Lawrence Copley Thaws of the Social Register tendered a garden party last week in honor of the christening of their new 40-foot trailer . . . Alfred P. Sloan, head of General Motors—the company which built the trailer—was scheduled to conduct the christening ceremonies. Sloan arrived too late, however, because he went to the World's Fair to greet the King and Queen . . . And so his substitute was Byron Foy—of the Chrysler Co.

DEFEAT: Cary Grant saw Phil Barry's play, "Philadelphia Story," the other night . . . He went backstage later to visit Van Heflin, whose performance draw raves from the critics . . . "You're very good," Grant complimented him, "but you won't play that part in the movie version" . . . "Why not?" asked Heflin . . . "Because," the screen star informed, "I will."

CHANCE: George Jessel was invited to dine at the home of Goodman Ace the other night and to play bridge there with Ace, Al Jolson and George Burns . . . After dinner the quartet seated themselves around the bridge table and the cards were dealt for the first hand . . . "I pass," said Jessel . . . "I pass," Ace followed . . . Jolson and Burns also passed . . . "Well, boys," Jessel announced, "thanks for a lovely dinner and a lovely bridge game. Good night"—and he walked out.

GREETING: Jack Dempsey tells of the first visit to New York made by his father, Hiram Dempsey—who always refers to Jack by his true name, "Harry" . . . The senior Dempsey was accompanied on that trip by John Dempsey, another son . . . They arrived at the Ansonia Hotel, alighted from their cab and then Hiram Dempsey started gaping at the tall buildings around him . . . Nick the Greek surveyed the stranger, who obviously was a Yokel, and uttered the Yokel greeting: "Har'ya, Hiram" . . . "Now isn't that nice and friendly of you," Dempsey's father acknowledged. "I'll bet Harry arranged this."

LOCAL NEWS: Ferde Grofe is completing a Madison Square Garden suite, with a motif for each of the five sports featured at the garden. He's also writing a musical biography of Will Rogers . . . The stockholders of "The American Way" will receive checks representing the first installment of 15 per cent on the return of their investment . . . Bristol-Meyers and the Woodbury Soap Co. are negotiating a deal.

MISTAKE: Theresa Helburn, managing director of the Theater Guild—which is presenting the new Katharine Hepburn play—was invited to address a Brooklyn drama group last week . . . After her speech a number of the guests gathered around her and stared, disappointedly . . . "Frankly," they assured Miss Helburn, "you don't look a bit the way you look on the screen."

APPEAL: Carl Ackerman, dean of the Columbia School of Journalism, was a visitor at the East Side restaurant of Lupkowitz and Moskowitz . . . "Imagine finding you here," a colleague stated . . . "Why not? I like it here," Ackerman explained. "This place appeals to me—phonetically."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, June 15 (INS).—Just a moment, please—may I prophesy that Ann Sothern will be one of the biggest stars on the M-G-M lot within the year? Annie is so good in "Maisie" that the New York critics forgot some of the big pictures to tell their readers what a swell performance she gave, and the Hollywood reviewers were equally enthusiastic. Today M-G-M signed her to a long-term contract that calls for plenty of do re mi. J. Walter Ruben, who produced "Maisie," is doing the same for Ann's first picture, "How to Get Tough," by Robert Ardsley.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Far be it from me to tell tales out of school, but I heard an amusing story about the closing of the deal. Leo, the lion, had an idea that Annie would simply swoon over getting a "big-time" contract. But not at all. She stood right up to them and talked real money and got it. I've always thought the little Sothern had more real "oomph" and was a better actress than a half dozen other glamour girls. She is the nearest thing to Jean Harlow.

The long-threatened filmed life story of Thomas Edison is fast becoming a reality. Next week, John Considine, jr., and Dore Schary leave to consult with tary of the Navy and son of the Charles Edison, Assistant Secretinventor, and his widow, since remarried and now Mrs. Hughes. A great idea surrounds this biography, which will be told in two periods, the Boy Edison and the Wizard of Menlo Park. In the boyhood sequences Mickey Rooney plays the young Edison. In the adult story of the man who gave us many inventions and fathered the motion pictures, we will see Spencer Tracy. Nice if it can be made this year—the fiftieth anniversary of Edison's invention of the Kinetoscope.

Those of us who were on newspapers when America went to war 20 years ago remember so well Father Duffy, of "the Fighting Sixty-Ninth," beloved chaplain of New York's crack Irish regiment. Those who were not old enough to remember the courageous deeds of this kindly priest have read about him in the press, magazines and in books, for there have been few to equal him in popularity. So it's interesting that Darryl Zanuck has had his research department collecitng biographical data on the fighting chaplain for some months, and at an early date will make a movie based on Father Duffy's life.

Ted Peckham, the lad who furnished escorts for lonely ladies, was put out of business last week when his license was taken away, but his fame goes on. "Male Escorts" has been written by Paul Wing, father of Toby, and Green Peyton and sold to Sam Marx, story editor of Columbia. Paramount, you may remember, attempted to do a picture with Peckham, but it did not work out. He came here to script the picture and, after some weeks, Para decided there wasn't enough of a story. Columbia has a new slant on Peckham's interesting activities.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Bill Grady's wife has gone to Paris and 'tis rumored she will not return—to him; Sally Eilers went from the train straight to the R. K. O. Studios for fittings for "Full Confession;" Don Castle, Hollywood's newest glamour boy, spending his evenings with Jane Gilbert, New York stage beauty; M-G-M would like to have Myrna Loy postpone that European holiday, but there isn't a chance, because she has made all her plans; what a merry reunion of old friends at Orey Kelly's party honoring Constance Talmadge Netcher. The three sisters—Nora, Connie and Natalie—had lots of laughs over old photographs Orey has of the girls when they were Hollywood's top stars; William Haines told several priceless stories of his movie experiences.

Alice Faye is nursing a mean cold; Arline Judge and Dan Topping, back from Honolulu, stepping out at the Troc; really social night there, with Joan Bennett and Wooly Donahue chaperoned by sister Constance and Gilbert Roland; Mickey Rooney christened the new portable dressing room Norma Shearer gave him by throwing a party on the set; Paul Muni is sporting a new mustache—all for his art. He is back from Honolulu already—believe it or not; the Sol Wurtzels are giving Jean Rogers and Danny Winkler, the newlyweds, a dinner Saturday night; Mrs. Darryl Zanuck, Constance Bennett and Mrs. Jay Paley are introducing Dorothy Draper to Hollywood, at a tea given at the Paley residence; Dick Greene, although home from the hospital, has to remain in bed; Basil Rathbone, who picks up several of his actor pals and takes them to work in his station wagon, was given a plaque by his ungrateful friends reading, "Rathbone Transport Co.—Irregular Service."

Thta's all for today. See you tomorrow.

Jane Won't Tell About Romance

Jane Bryan is one of the easiest persons in Hollywood to talk to. She is ever-agreeable and never too busy to pose for pictures or be interviewed.

But there is one definite "ban" on Jane's list of interview subjects. That is "romance."

"If I have a love affair—or if I have not—it is my own business—not for the world to know," states Jane.

A New Theater Is Added to Warner Chain

The Kennedy Serves Growing Neighborhood Of Colonial Design

By Nelson B. Bell

Welcomed by the Hon. Melvin C. Hazen, president of the Board of District Commissioners, and D. W. Gabelin, president of the Chillum Heights Citizens' Association, to a thickly populated residential section of northwest Washington, heretofore without its own neighborhood motion picture house, the Warner Brothers' handsome new Kennedy Theater last night threw open its doors to the public.

Located on Kennedy street, near Fourth, the Kennedy brings the total number of Warner Brothers theaters in the Capital to 21. It is a spacious structure of colonial brick, with roomy, air-cooled lobby and an expansive auditorium, seating 1,000 on one floor. The color scheme of the interior is dominated by blues and terra cotta, with the side walls in deep figured blue tapestry and the proscenium and grill drapes in the harmonious autumn tone. The orchestra chairs also are upholstered in this hue. The lighting is semi-direct with the fixtures in consonance with the colonial design that has been adhered to throughout. Deep-pile carpet covers the floor.

At either side of the auditorium, at the rear, are commodious rest rooms for both men and women. Each is ornately furnished and equipped with every facility for comfort and personal refreshment.

Speeches Are Felicitous

Both Commissioner Hazen and Mr. Gabelein were felicitous in their brief remarks last evening at the 8:30 dedication. They were preceded on the program by the playing of "The Star Spangled Banner," with a flag, in natural colors, waving on the screen, and the unreeling of the Warner Brothers' pledge of service to the community. The major screen feature of the opening bill was "Juarez," starring Paul Muni and Bette Davis, supplemented by the Pathe News and "Believe It or Else," a Merrie Melodie cartoon comedy in colors. Today's attraction will be W. C. Fields, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy in "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man."

The Kennedy was designed by John Eberson, noted New York theater architect, and built by the Mohler Construction Company of this city. It will be operated under long-term lease as another unit in the expansive circuit of Warner theaters presided over in this territory by John J. Payette, zone manager of all Warner interests in and around Washington.

An enthusiastic capacity audience attended last night's inaugural and found the new house greatly to its liking.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., June 15.—Well, Roz Russell and Paulette Goddard have done it! The fight, I mean, in "The Women." Paulette looks like an Italian sunset. She actually cut off her nails. I don't mean toe nails—she wore boots. But Roz retained hers—she wore gloves. For a movement she was afraid she'd cracked three ribs, because if Roz falls off a park bench, she breaks something.

HOPPER

She's always falling. Too curious to look where she's going. Once she fell flat at Central Park Casino and she had three male escorts. They said: "Where's Roz?"

From the floor she answered: "Here I am boys, help me up." She broke her wrist that time, didn't know it 'til next day. On her way to Honolulu once, she fell and broke her ankle, but had more fun in a cast than we'd have on both feet.

She sure got the worst of it in "The Women" when Mary Boland plopped atop of her and she screamed: "Get that big baboon off me."

"Baboon?" said Mary, "I never worked so hard in my whole life. I ride a horse. Up to now all I've known about horses is that the head shakes and the tail swishes, but when I got on this beast, it stood straight up in the air. And on its back, I was supposed to roll me own cigarette."

Her costume—pair of dungarees, cowboy's hobnailed belt, hitting her figure in just the wrong place, ropes and ropes of pearls and a platter diamond pin holding her red bandana in place!

Paulette looked like a George Petty sports model, but finished as Oliver Twist. She bribed the male crew with baloney! You'd have died seeing a huge bundle of sandwiches tied with a rope, being hauled up to electricians overhead.

No one has written about men in "The Women." Even if it is only a quiet scene between Norma Shearer and Joan Fontaine, 40 men are watching them. I said to one: "I bet you go home nights and beat your wife." "No," he confessed. "But I've taken no back lip since I've been on this one."

Norman McLeod and Milton Bren are sure playing in luck getting Norma Shearer for their star in "Remember," their first at Metro. And if Bob Taylor finishes "Northwest Passage" they'll get him, too. On the other hand, they're unlucky. They may land in the doghouse, because they completed the script in eight weeks—practically an unheard-of feat!

Now that Ina Claire's working with Garbo, she wears slacks, dark glasses and an 1890 hat.

Ina says: "It costs money to be happy." Happiness put 10 pounds on her, but she's ripped it off in a week. She got a gold medal from Academy of Arts and Letters for her speech, but is now back, after 15 years, taking English again from that amazing Gertrude Fogler.

Our producer's wives knit three dozen sweaters which were sold at Ann Lehr's benefit at the Eddie Robinson house. Did such a swell job there wasn't one left over. I bought one of Mrs. Mayer's. She knit three.

Dolores del Rio is excited about an offer to make pictures in South America. Why not? She's a great favorite there.

Billy Haines rounded up the old gang for a farewell to Aileen Pringle, who is making New York her home. Glad to see Connie Talmadge again. Eddie Wilkerson a barker for the New York World's Fair.

Bill's table was draped with a fishnet cloth with a huge set shell in the center. In this was a mahogany head, the top filled with pink carnations to form a hat. Baby shells falling out of the big one. Down center, more sea shells with Cecil Brunner roses. Food matched decor.

Orry-Kelly tells me he's off to Australia. Don't forget your red flannels!

Permit Suspended For Sale to Minor

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday suspended for 60 days the license of the Ambassador Beer and Liquor Shop, 2400 block of Eighteenth street northwest, following a charge of selling liquor to an "intoxicated minor."

The action followed four hearings. The attorneys for the licensee argued no such sale had been made. Board Chairman Thomas E. Lodge said an inspector witnessed the transaction. At the same time the board took under advisement a charge against the 1925 F Street Club for violating the Saturday midnight sale ban.

Work Crucial 1940 Issue, Lewis Asserts

Woll Replies to C. I. O. President, Calling Him Rude to Roosevelt

By the Associated Press.

President John L. Lewis told the C. I. O. executive board yesterday that any candidate seeking office in 1940 "will have to be qualified to offer a program that will give people work."

Lewis disclosed at a press conference that he had told the concluding session of the board's midyear meeting that unemployment was America's No. 1 problem. He added, "I know of no budding statesman aspiring to pre-eminence in American politics who has made any suggestion on this question.

His final speech to the board, he said, was largely a summary of current economic conditions.

After his blunt assertion Wednesday that peace negotiations with the A. F. of L. were "impossible," Lewis declined to say whether he would go through the formality of transmitting his views on the subject to President Roosevelt or the A. F. of L.

Negotiations were undertaken under White House auspices.

Woll Accuses Lewis

New York, June 15 (U.P.).—Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, tonight accused John L. Lewis of "blasting all hope of peace and unity in the labor movement" and of discourtesy to President Roosevelt.

Woll's statement was a reply to Lewis' announcement of last night that peace negotiations between the C. I. O. and A. F. L. would be abandoned.

"Mr. Lewis' statement, marking an abrupt termination of the negotiations," said Woll, who was secretary of the A. F. L. committee appointed to make peace with the C. I. O., "was discourteous to the President in that the Chief Executive had requested the representatives of both the A. F. of L. and C. I. O. under no circumstances to terminate negotiations without first consulting with him."

Woll declared it was the second time Lewis "has deliberately wrecked efforts to restore peace in the family of labor."

"The first occasion," he said, "was in December, 1937, when committees representing the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. had reached a unanimous agreement, which was vetoed at the last moment by Mr. Lewis. At that time, too, efforts were made to becloud the issue and misrepresent the agreement that had been reached."

Cut Public Pay, Murphy Urges

4,000,000 employes, less than 3,000,000 should be plenty, and instead of a payroll of $6,000,000,000 a year, less than $5,000,000,000 should suffice."

The Attorney General then called for an end "to the ancient practice of passing out Government jobs in payment of political debts," and said "with it we must abandon the old companion idea that the Government pay roll is a legitimate field for charity and benevolence toward special groups and persons who lack qualifications for public service."

"Both notions are unsound, poor political science and, above all, poor public economy," he added.

A large percentage of public jobs, Murphy contended, is controlled by machine politics and special interest groups. "The opposition of these groups, together with public ignorance of much of the inefficiency, graft and waste resulting from the spoils system, has been enough to undermine virtually every substantial effort to establish and enforce sound personnel management in our Government."

Murphy recalled President Cleveland's message to Congress 48 years ago in which the Democratic President said the "course of civil service reform in this country . . . illustrates how strong a hold a movement gains upon our people which has underlying it a sentiment of justice and right and which at the same time promises better administration of their government."

Although Murphy continued, civil service still was "firmly entrenched in the respect and esteem of the American people . . . yet, somehow, we have not made the progress that might have been anticipated in Cleveland's day for a reform so obviously necessary and so undeniably progressive."

"Perhaps," he observed, "the public has been apathetic—as it so often is about reforms of the less spectacular variety. Perhaps those who have a stake in the spoils system have been skillful and energetic enough to ward off a sweeping reform movement. Probably, the reason is a mixture of both."

Commenting that the field for civil service reform was still "broad and fertile," Murphy turned to a study of the number of government employes.

In the National Government, he said, there were approximately 900,000 civil employes, receiving in salaries about one and one-half billion dollars a year. In state and local governments, he added, it was estimated reliably that there were more than 3,000,000 employes, paid over $4,000,000,000 annually.

The average income of each of approximately 30,000,000 families in the United States, he continued, was about $1,500 annually. On that basis, he said, the average family's share of the expense of the public pay roll was $200 a year.

Murphy asserted he was convinced the average family foot the bills for "this enormous pay roll, either through taxation, or through indirect taxation in the purchase of commodities and services.

But the cost of Government, the Attorney General said, was "not our only concern."

C.I.O. Electrical Union Sues Rival, Charging Boycott

New York, June 15 (AP).—The United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America (C. I. O.) sued the A. F. L.'s International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and others today, asking an injunction against an alleged boycott of goods made with C. I. O. labor, and damages of some $250,000.

Among the defendants were two of the A. F. L. union's locals, seven of its officers, 13 New York contractors and the National Electrical Products Corporation, a manufacturing concern.

The suit may serve as a test case on how far court action may go in the settlement of jurisdictional disputes between unions.

Veterinarian Exposed To Rabies Still Hunted

Police last night rebroadcast a warning to Dr. Hugh McCormick, of Grand Rapids, Mich., who was exposed to rabies last week and apparently has no knowledge of his predicament. A veterinarian, Dr. McCormick left his home for the World's Fair, and it was not until he had departed that it was discovered that one of the animals he had handled had rabies. Wednesday night police in the East sought the doctor to notify him of his danger. At intervals yesterday the warning was repeated.

What, No Watteau?

In the line of parlor entertainment, guessing games have lately given way in popularity to games of choice. These range from choosing people to be invited to the perfect dinner party to selecting articles for a "time capsule" to portray our civilization to the distant future.

Authorities at the Louvre Museum in Paris also recently gave up taking chances in favor of a predetermined choice. They published a list of paintings to be saved, if there is time, in event of airplane bombardment or other by-product of modern civilization. The list of approximately 200 highly preferred paintings is followed by a second and third list. No reasons were given for the gradings, but every precaution has been taken to assure the preservation of the chosen works of art.

Among those paintings to which the Louvre authorities were relatively indifferent was, appropriately enough, Antoine Watteau's "l'Indifferent," which they passed up in favor of another of his paintings. Not so the thief who recently took the little 8-by-10-inch picture from its place on the wall and disappeared with it.

The reason for the theft is not clear. Difficulties involved in disposing of a well-known painting thus acquired are all but insurmountable. The loss of "l'Indifferent" was widely publicized throughout the world. It is indeed a serious reflection on our civilization, which is deeply shocked at the loss of a single possession but at the same time must choose few out of many masterpieces to save for the enjoyment of a future generation. How ironic that our descendants may not choose for themselves.

The Genetic Treason

Twenty-four students of the Timiryazeff Agricultural Academy in Moscow are said to have denounced the Mendelian law as an abominable bourgeois superstition. In a manifesto published in Socialist Agriculture, an official government organ, these students declare that Mendelism and all it implies is wholly contrary to the gospel according to Marx.

They demand that a new textbook on plant breeding, purged of all nonsense about genes in the chromosones, be prepared by Prof. T. D. Lysenko, the "Soviet Burbank." In consequence, Lysenko's rival, Prof. N. I. Vaviloff, seems to be in something of a spot. For if it should turn out that the science of genetics is nothing better than thinly disguised counter-revolutionary propaganda, you can imagine what is likely to happen to one of the world's greatest geneticists.

There is a bare chance, of course, that it may prove to be just the other way around. Perhaps after the G. P. U. has worked over the case awhile Vaviloff, Father Mendel and our own Dr. Thomas Hunt Morgan may wind up together in the same safe bed of dialectic materialism, while Prof. Lysenko, the 24 students and the editor of Socialist Agriculture may be confessing themselves the paid agents of Japanese imperialists and Trotzkyist wreckers. It is barely possible we may hear of them shouting into microphones how they sought to undermine proletarian morale by telling the workers they have no genes. Thus deliberately confused, the workers might imagine themselves a sort of sansculottes and so fall into a bourgeois French revolutionary ideology.

In fact, a pretty smooth case could be worked out against the 24 students and Lysenko. Suppose, for instance, that the Communist red and the monarchical white should, as seems likely enough, be mated in an Anglo-Russian alliance. Will it be transformed thereby and forever into a prettified pink? Prof. Lysenko and his followers would seem to suggest as much, whereas Father Mendel and Prof. Vaviloff seem to imply that, all in good time, red would be as red as ever. Nevertheless it is Prof. Lysenko and not Prof. Vaviloff who seems to have the higher degree of survival quality (Darwin is still a good Marxist) at this writing.

Meanwhile, you can well imagine how every schoolmarm in the U. S. S. R. must be trembling in her shoes. For who knows how soon the Kremlin may discover that the multiplication table itself is nothing more than a gigantic Trotzkyist plot? "Two times two is four"—why, the very sound of the words smacks of conspiracy.

Restricted Relief

The relief bill now before Congress represents a really serious effort to reduce the scale of WPA expenditures. The fact that the appropriation for the WPA program has been drastically cut is not, in itself, very important. For the regularity with which Congress has of late passed deficiency relief legislation has tended to deprive original appropriation bills of the significance they once had.

The present bill is important mainly because it represents an earnest attempt to improve WPA policies and procedures which at present, encourage extravagance. Representative Woodrum rightly emphasizes the value of writing into the law restrictions and limitations designed to improve the WPA program and to force the localities to help defray a substantial part of the cost of all relief projects.

The House bill stops far short of the thorough overhauling that the relief system requires. However, it does attempt to correct some of the obvious abuses of the present organization. The Federal theater project, which is very costly in proportion to the amount of employment it provides, would be dropped and other Federal projects—music, arts, writers and historical documents—would only be permitted when the localities helped to finance them. It seems safe to conclude that such a requirement would mean the virtual elimination of these particular white-collar projects.

Further indication of the desire to put a really effective check upon relief spending is afforded by writing into the bill a provision that local sponsors of WPA projects shall be compelled to make an "adequate contribution" to finance the cost of such undertakings. Another important provision is that calling for apportionment of work relief among the States on the basis of jobs, according to a statutory formula.

By such means and in various other ways, the bill aims to reduce the cost of relief. Thus, the establishment of a security wage, instead of payment of so-called prevailing wages, and the fixing of a uniform number of hours of work per month for WPA enrollees would help to reduce per unit job costs. There are also provisions for mandatory suspension of relief workers after 18 months of employment. And more rigorous and frequent pruning and inspection of relief rolls is also contemplated.

Some of the proposed changes are open to criticism, but in the main they are aimed directly at those defects and weaknesses of the present loose organization that have offered positive incentives to extravagance. If this bill should pass, even in a modified form, it will put an end to the practice of giving the President a free hand in spending relief funds. That practice is largely responsible for the inability of Congress to put an effective check upon relief spending.

A mere change in the central administrative organization, such as the proposed replacement of the single administrator by a board of three, would do little to improve the situation. What is needed is for Congress to define a relief policy that will provide a more or less automatic check upon outlays, and then incorporate that policy in relief legislation. That in brief, is what the Appropriations Committee has undertaken to do and with a large measure of success.

Our Concern, Too

The grave struggle going on at Tientsin between the British and the Japanese does not, at first glance, seem to concern the United States at all.

There is no American concession in Tientsin, or, for that matter, anywhere else in China. And the Japanese have been especially careful, for the time being at least, to avoid molesting Americans residing and doing business in Tientsin, though they have not hesitated to molest Englishmen and Frenchmen.

Yet the United States cannot really be indifferent to what is going on in the North China treaty port. The issue posed there involves the future of all foreigners everywhere in China. If Great Britain and France can be brought to their knees at Tientsin, and compelled to accept the far-reaching demands laid down by the Japanese authorities as the price for ending the blockade of the British and French concessions, a precedent of extraordinary significance will be established. It would mean that Japan's fiat would be law throughout Eastern Asia and that foreigners would henceforth be permitted to live and trade in China only on the sufferance of the island empire.

The responsibility of opposing this latest and least defensible Japanese encroachment on foreign treaty rights and interests thus devolves on all the treaty powers. And it is presumably because they fear a common stand by Great Britain, France and the United States that the Japanese authorities at Tientsin are temporarily treating Americans in a more lenient manner than nationals of Great Britain and France. They realize how devastating it would be for them if they had to court not merely British and French but also American reprisals.

In the meantime, the latest Gallup poll reveals the extent to which American sentiment has hardened against Japan during the past two years. The proportion of Americans who, at the outset, were indifferent to the Sino-Japanese struggle was very large. That proportion has been very considerably reduced. And American sympathies are now overwhelmingly on the side of China.

What is more, Americans seem to feel that something ought to be done about it. No fewer than 66 out of every hundred polled favor a boycott of goods made in Japan. And 72 per cent think the United States should forbid shipments of arms or ammunition from this country to Japan.

Mercurial Legislation

As Representative Harter said, in the debate on the bill limiting operations of the TVA, that agency is an "existing fact." Many of his colleagues, he intimated, are unaware that "it is with us and that, whether we like it or not, we have to make the best of it."

Having been crowded to the wall in an unequal competitive battle with the TVA, certain privately owned utilities are now prepared "to make the best of it" by selling their properties at a fair value to the Government. Arrangements satisfactory to both sides have been completed, and all that remains to be done is to secure Congressional authorization to carry out the deal.

Counties in the TVA area, deprived of revenue by withdrawal of private utilities, are similarly trying to make the best of a bad tax situation by working out adjustment plans with State and local authorities.

All these difficult problems should have been foreseen. They might have been avoided if the Administration had worked out a national power program before embarking upon its yardstick experiments. Nevertheless, the problems are now present and seem in a fair way to be solved constructively by mutual agreement of the interests directly concerned.

At this juncture, however, the House has decided upon fundamental amendment of TVA legislation, instead of being content to authorize the agency to carry out its agreement with the private companies. It is proposed, under the bill pushed through this week, strictly to limit the area served by the TVA; to make the agency accountable for expenditures to the Comptroller General; to cut the amount of bonds issued in payment of the private utility properties; and to compel those benefited by the use of TVA power to make up for the tax losses suffered by local governments.

It seems unlikely that the Senate will acquiesce in amendments that, apart from their merits or demerits, call for exhaustive study and debate. The discussion on the floor of the House clearly indicated that many Congressmen were not acquainted with the provisions of the bill and were not at all in agreement as to its purpose and effect. Nevertheless, they saw no impropriety in rushing it through without adequate consideration.

The mercurial quality of legislators who turn against their own creations, who carelessly bestow power and just as carelessly try to recapture it, makes one doubt whether there can ever be a satisfactory legislative formula for control of publicly owned utilities in competition with private concerns. Even if satisfactory adjustments are worked out, there is no assurance that they will not be upset by legislative whirlwinds like the one that shook the House and "stunned" Senator Norris.

Unnatural History

Of the millions of bees now busily making honey we hear little. But the bee that stung a marine at Ingleside, Fairfax County, Va., was out to make history. The marine was driving a car and when he attempted to defend himself against this brutal and unprovoked attack the car hit an abutment and he and his companions were bruised. If they had not been marines the injuries might have been serious.

In Watertown, Mass., a squirrel who very evidently thought herself a swallow built a nest in the chimney of a new house. When the owner started to keep the first of his home fires burning the house filled with smoke. Firemen solved the mystery. With a squirrel's nest in the chimney it followed that the fire wouldn't burn for nuts.

Which teaches us that though a bee's life story is interesting when she says it with flowers, it must be told to the marines to achieve real publicity. And when a squirrel switches from arboreal to intramural habits she brings about the intriguing paradox of being really up a tree when she is in a chimney.

Now and then a poet hits it lucky. One in Kentucky sued a man who beat him up about a poem he wrote and the court awarded the poet $200 to cover damages.

The man who wrote "Home, Sweet Home" never owned a home, and Federal Housing Administrator Stewart McDonald lives in a hotel.

Middle age has set in when you somewhat resent a 20-year-old calling you "mister" and feel he's a bit fresh if he calls you by your first name.

Puerto Rican Problems

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was a pleasure to learn of the fine tribute paid to Gov. Winship of Puerto Rico by President Roosevelt for his untiring efforts since his appointment in 1934. It must have been rather embarrassing to those who had been antagonistic toward Winship. Among them is a New York Congressman who unjustly denounced the Governor on the floor of the House and in political speeches. I have never heard that he attempted to prove his statements or offered apologies for the unfair remarks.

It would not surprise me if Admiral Leahy, successor to Winship, may also find insincerity on the part of extremists who desire to create class hatred. I hope that Leahy will not permit distorted facts to go unchallenged. It seems to me that if these self-appointed reformers would insist upon modification of the wage-hour law, which has placed hundreds of thousands of Puerto Ricans on relief, they would be doing her people an act of charity.

There is a vast difference in living costs in Puerto Rico as compared with the United States. The Philippine Islands are exempt from the terms of the act, consequently Puerto Rican industries are unable to compete with competition from that source. This condition, in my opinion, calls for due deliberation on the part of our Congress.

If Everyone Cared Enough

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was thrilled to see how the press in Washington covered the meeting in Constitution Hall in presenting Moral Rearmament to America. I feel your co-operation will do much toward opening people's hearts to begin to see that on a basis of moral rearmament, "If everyone cared enough, and if everyone shared enough, everyone would have enough."

Some of us secretaries and clerks in Government have begun to see that it means for us so caring about the details of our job and assuming such responsibility for them, that the person we work for is free to give his full creative energies to the job he does for the Nation.

Manners

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of June 13, on the intangible results of the visit of Britain's royal couple, is in sharp contrast to the bunch of letters on the editorial page expressive for the most part of cynicism.

Our city and country had an exemplification of good manners personalized in King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, such as should not be lost on our people. No words are too strong in speaking of the way our police and those who arranged the schedule for the King and Queen carried through without hitch their program; but the fine sense, the cordial response, the unabated interest, the absence of criticism in word or look, on the part of these royal visitors must shine in the memories of our people like a pleasant and vivid dream.

The Whitman Exhibit

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: The Whitmaniana now to be seen at the Library of Congress holds much interest for those who admire "Leaves of Grass."

Here will be found many photographs of the poet, from early life to late maturity; also of his father, strangely like the Emerson of younger days, and of his mother, a Van Velsor, of sturdy appearance. Also to be seen are editions of "Leaves of Grass;" scenes from hospital days of the Civil War; letters and photographs of such admirers as Robert Louis Stevenson, John Ruskin, John Addington Symands, Edward Carpenter and John Burroughs, Dr. Richard Buche and Horace Traubel, biographers. There are numerous photographs of Anne Gilchrist, who came from England to be near him. Whitman's letters to Anne Gilchrist express caution, breathing profound admiration, but not passion. There are photographs of the modest home in Camden, N. J., where the poet ended his last stricken years.

For some years during the Civil War days, Whitman lived in Washington. Day after day, month after month, the afflicted soldiers were visited in the camps and cared for. These were "the most profound moments of my life," he writes. Several Washington houses are associated with the Whitman of this period. The best known of these is 1407 L street northwest. From nearby Vermont avenue, Lincoln was frequently seen, surrounded by cavalry, driving from Soldiers' Home to the White House. "The carriage was not much," Whitman tells us.

None of these homes are marked. Maybe some organization, such as the Pen Women, will encourage a movement to provide markers.

Reforms In WPA

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The special House sub-committee has finally come forth with something in reforms of the much-heralded WPA. Many of the proposed reforms have been long needed.

The abandonment of the "prevailing wage" makes an excellent start. The dropping of all long-termed WPA relief workers, pending a careful review of their eligibility is another.

The elimination of the so-called Federal theater project stands out boldly as a spearhead.

The committee, in limiting the "arts" and "writers" projects to operate only when sponsored and partly financed by States, will no doubt uncover what subversive organizations are chiefly interested in perpetuating these WPA projects.

Noise

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now that we have had the King and Queen with a little noise, why not have a great big noise and a salute of two times 21 guns for Hjalmar Procope, Minister to the United States from Finland, when he delivers Finland's check on account to the Treasurer?

Chestnut Street

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To those interested in the preservation of American antiquities, open house day on Chestnut street, Salem, Mass., on June 28 should be of interest, for old Salem was one of the most highly developed seaports of the early nineteenth century. The Department of the Interior is already engaged under the National Park Service in the reconstruction of Derby Wharf and the adjacent houses of Richard Derby.

From the fortunes accumulated from the ships that Salem people sent to all ports of the world, the merchants embarked on building mansions in keeping with their newly acquired wealth. Chestnut street, built in the first half of the nineteenth century, is one of the finest examples of Federal architecture in the country, remaining still much as it was when the houses were erected. This past winter the Chestnut Street Associates was organized to preserve as far as possible the appearance and character of the street.

Many of the houses contain treasures brought back from foreign ports by the old sea captains. The atmosphere of the olden days will be re-created for the occasion. The ancient coach that once carried the belles of Salem to the balls at Hamilton Hall will be on the street. The Gibraltar woman whose candies are known even now to everyone familiar with Salem will be a part of the show. Women in costumes for which Salem attics are now being ransacked will act as guides. Dancing will be seen in some of the gardens.

The Neutrality Bill

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems the Foreign Affairs Committee on June 13 reported favorably the repeal of the neutrality bill on arms embargo provision of the present law, and opening American markets to trade with belligerents.

The American people of the United States do not want our country involved in any foreign war—but, if this bill goes through and is passed, it will not be the wish of the true American people. This will start the ball rolling and is what nazlism, communism and every other foreign element that is not constructive want. Why should our country, practically the only one where peace and happiness reigns, open its doors to such danger?

Let us hope the American people awaken to these things for the protection of a most glorious country and her people.

Training School

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "Marked for Destruction," in The Post of June 13 has been read again and again and I don't agree with your finding in this case. The National Training School for Girls can be run on the appropriation as provided by Congress, I think, and not be stinted under proper management.

Those girls need training under strict discipline, gently administered by a man or woman who can command their respect. I could take that school with 50 girls and eight people to run the place, two at night and six in the daytime, and keep perfect order and I'd keep those girls busy from sunup to sundown, mostly in gardens and truck patches out in the sun, raising food to feed them and I would keep those girls happy and contented.

The Post Impressionist

Juggler

HE SAT looking out over the river. The time was late afternoon. His features might once have been called "finely cut," but now they were merely sharp, and the whole tone of his face was grayish and smudged like a bad crayon drawing. A suit that had once been modish, of greenish-gray material, needed a visit to the cleaner, and his pink-striped shirt was badly worn. A gray felt hat was pulled over his eyes. The man sitting next to him on the pile of boards offered him a cigaret. He shook his head and went back into his own brooding. Then he was talking, as if to me, more to himself.

"You wouldn't think, would you, that I am Juggio?"

At the name something stirred just below consciousness.

"They said that I was the greatest juggler in the business, at one time. The Thirteen Jugglers! Maybe that was what did it. I was the first . . . or maybe the thirteenth. Juggio, the odd man, the star."

Of course, I remembered. I had seen them years ago in the circus and in vaudeville.

"Tours . . . all over the States and in Europe. France and Germany, before the war. A season in London. Then Australia, and a year in South America. Others were listening now.

"We never changed our act. Didn't have to . . . it was that good. Done mostly with clubs. It was the speed, precision, timing and the color. That got the crowds, the color. Gold, silver, scarlet, green, colors flashing all over the stage, making patterns. Then the lights went out. The clubs were changed to thin, transparent ones, lighted by tiny electric lights. Any little tap would smash them. But we didn't break many . . . we were that good.

"In the dark the colored lights flashed like bursts of fireworks, or maybe fireflies over meadows. I have heard people say that, but I wouldn't know. I'm not much for the country. The band played soft, pretty music. Then a crash of the brass. The lights came on. The act was over. Such applause. We had to take curtain calls again and again. Especially Juggio!"

He sighed.

"I don't know how it started, my trouble. I was sick, pains all over. I went to the hospital. I was sick for months, some kind of rheumatism, they said." He took his hands out of his pockets and laid them before us, on his knees. I never saw worse. Twisted, misshapen things, some fingers bent completely backwards, others tortured toward the palms.

The man who had first offered him a cigaret now lighted one and silently extended his arm. He put the cigaret in Juggio's mouth. His own hands were shaking.

"There must be places—" I stammered.

"Yes, I've tried homes and such. The last one had trees all around it. It was in the country. I was a city boy, as I told you. And it rained, rained. The rain beat on the windows all day and all night, and the long branches of the trees knocked on the glass. Most of the time I was alone in the ward. There were not many there just then. But all that was not the worst!"

He leaned toward me, and putting his hand over his mouth he whispered, "I can't feed myself."

I looked at the pavement. I heard the sounds, a boat whistle on the river, calls of street peddlars, a woman's high-pitched laugh.

"They had to feed me, the orderlies. Their fingers were clumsy, to me. They were kind, they meant well. But sometimes they laughed. So I came away."

"I've got a room in one of those old houses back from the river. It was a fine old place once. The boys send me a little money. Sometimes I sell . . . things. I get along."

"It's nearly dinner time." I said. I had the decency to color. But a kind of a dreary smile came over his face.

"I'm going to dinner, too. Joe will be coming for me. Joe's my pal. We always eat together."

"That's good," I managed to stammer.

"When we were playing in Bordeaux (that's France you know) there was a little restaurant. Show people used to eat there. Good food and good company. Mme. Peronne was the proprietor. She had her troubles, and after the war she came to America. Some of the boys found her running a little restaurant here. Very small, but very good. Only a few people know about it, show people and such.

"There are checked red and white tablecloths, and the china is heavy. The food is good. There is a table by the window, reserved especially for me. Madame serves plenty of good ragout, food that one can eat with a spoon. She had a spoon made . . . for me . . . a spoon with a crooked handle that fits here, so! (He showed me.) A baby's spoon . . . for Juggio! When I want other food, my pal feeds me. I don't mind so much, with Joe. He was a juggler, too. He has clever hands. He makes a joke of it, and we laugh. Madame smiles to see us. Every night she comes to my table, and she lays her hand on my shoulder.

"'Is everything as you like it, mon vieux?' she asks. She is still a pretty woman, with smooth black hair, and she is always very kind."

"'Oui,' I say."

Someone was coming toward us in the fading light, and Juggio rose from the pile of boards. The two men walked away together, and they were no different from anyone else, except that the hands of one were shoved deep down into his pockets.

Fair Enough

Politics And Racing

THE PEOPLE of New Jersey, few of whom ever have seen a race of running horses in their State because racing was outlawed there about 40 years ago, will vote June 20 on a Constitutional Amendment to revive the sport, or racket, with pari-mutuel betting. Should the amendment carry, a track would be established close to the Jersey end of the George Washington Bridge, in plain sight of Midtown and Uptown New York and only a few minutes by omnibus or taxi from the richest and ripest sucker crop in the world.

This track probably would outdraw the metropolitan New York plants having the misfortune to run concurrent meetings, because transportation would be much more comfortable and because New York racing for years has been conducted in the leaky-roof manner under conditions which have constituted a monopoly. The customers have had to patronize the metropolitan horse yards or travel as far as Rhode Island or Maryland, so the New York operators have felt no necessity to gentle them with modern luxuries, courteous treatment or convenient prices.

Hague Machine Would Control Track

THERE IS considerable opposition to the proposed revival in New Jersey because it may be taken for granted that racing under the control of the Hague machine of Jersey City and in Atlantic City under the control of any machine would be a racket more corrupt, if possible, in the political sense than racing in Florida or Rhode Island. Mr. Hague already has said, in a spirited campaign oration in favor of the mutuels, that racing would create 6,000 new jobs for Jerseymen—which may be an exaggeration—but he neglected to say that most of the jobs would be political patronage.

In Rhode Island, in the fall of 1937, Mr. Walter O'Hara, who ran the Narragansett Track, boasted that he had 600 jobs at his disposal and with the power that these jobs gave him, plus the power inherent in a huge supply of cash money, threatened to remove Gov. Quinn from office and elect a governor suitable to him. Not in so many words, but plainly, nevertheless, Mr. O'Hara revealed a conviction that in Rhode Island the race track, with its gambling monopoly and its patronage, was the super-government of the State. Some of his associates thought so themselves, but they thought it tactless of Mr. O'Hara to go around bragging about it, because the people had not thought of the matter in that light before.

Legalized Racing Tends To Arrogance

IN FLORIDA last spring a legislative inquiry revealed that State Legislators, whose position required them to vote on measures favored or opposed by the racing associations, one of which has been notorious for its criminal underworld connections, appealed to those tracks for jobs for their constituents. To retain their patronage they had to vote right on racing bills. And a lobbyist for one of the tracks openly threatened to close the plant and deprive the State of its mutuel revenue (an important item) if the Legislature should pass a bill reducing the racing week from six days to five. Once it has been legalized racing tends to become arrogant.

In New Jersey, however, the case would be slightly different. racing would have power, but the power would be placed in the hands of Mr. Hague principally and, outside his immediate zone, in the hands of other bosses.

Mysterious Change In Jersey Racket

THE RACING, however, need not necessarily be any more crooked than racing elsewhere, and it would not be necessary to manipulate the odds. Indeed, the opposition is directed not so much against racing and the mutuels as against this great increase in Mr. Hague's power and in the revenues of his machine.

There has been a mysterious change in the gambling racket in New Jersey lately. The famous, or notorious, national center of the wire-betting service which operated in and around Jersey City has been closed or greatly curtailed, and this move is attributed to the nosy activities of the United States Treasury. The Treasury has been investigating and seems to have struck trails leading from the Jersey City gambling center into politics. Obviously, there was great graft, because this gambling center was illegal and handled millions under protection.

So it is not unthinkable that in time the Federal Government, from this beginning, may feel called upon to do for Jersey City and other Jersey municipalities, which are unable to act for themselves, what the Department of Justice did for Kansas City.

$50,000,000 in Black Tom, Kingsland Claims Upheld Against Reich; Full Payment Doubtful

Hamburg Decision Reversed; $20,000,000 On Deposit in U. S.

By the Associated Press.

American claims that German saboteurs were responsible for the Black Tom and Kingsland (N. J.) explosions in 1916 and 1917 were upheld by an international commission yesterday, but whether the claimants ever could collect the major part of $50,000,000 damages appeared doubtful.

Before the 15-minute session of the German-American Mixed Claims Commission, which rendered the decision, the Reich Embassy had questioned the authority of the commission and had served notice that Germany would "ignore" any decision.

Consequently, there seemed little prospect that the American claimants might receive more than the $20,000,000 which Germany already had deposited in the United States Treasury. About $500,000,000 of bonds issued when Germany was a republic also were deposited with the Treasury in connection with the long-pending case, but these were said to have no value.

Germany's contention that the commission was incompetent to meet, or reach a decision, was based on the withdrawal last March of Dr. Victor Huecking, the German commissioner, who subsequently charged that Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts, the umpire, had indicated "bias."

After the decision, the German Embassy issued a statement describing the commission's action as "legally invalid" because of the vacancy of the German commissioner's post. Furthermore, the embassy said, the only question before the commission was whether to reopen the case and allow further argument and evidence "before a decision on the merits."

The commission's ruling yesterday reversed the Hamburg decision of 1930, which absolved Germany of any connection with the series of events which began when the mammoth freight terminal at Black Tom Island off Jersey City blew up on the night of July 30, 1916. That terrific explosion of 2,000,000 pounds of munitions en route to the allied powers was heard as far away as Philadelphia and rocked the metropolitan New York area.

The Kingsland catastrophe came on the following January 11, 1917, when a half million 3-inch shells exploded after a fire which started at a workman's bench.

Reversing the Hamburg decision, the commission found that both of these fires and explosions were the result of German sabotage in a period of American neutrality and were not caused by spontaneous combustion or industrial accident as the Germans sought to prove.

Fraud Proved

At the brief proceedings yesterday in an ornate chamber of the Supreme Court Building, Christopher Garnett, the American commissioner, merely filed his 500-page exhaustive treatment of the evidence and announced that Dr. Huecking and Dr. Richard Paulig, German counsel, would not participate.

Roberts then announced his concurrence with the Garnett opinion and emphasized that the resignation of Dr. Huecking did not "oust the jurisdiction of the commission."

Roberts declared that he and the American commissioner were agreed that the United States had "proved its allegation that fraud in the evidence presented by Germany misled the commission and affected its (Hamburg) decision in favor of Germany."

Roberts added that Dr. Huecking was advised of this conclusion before he withdrew from the tribunal's deliberation after all evidence had been received.

The principal claimants in the case are the Lehigh Valley Railroad, owner of the Black Tom Terminal, and the agency of the Canadian Car & Foundry Co., which built and operated the assembly plant at Kingsland, N. J.

Presidential Aides Propose New U. S. Spending Program

Morgenthau, Eccles, Smith and Delano Submit Plan Advocating Construction of Self-Liquidating Projects Such as Toll Bridges

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt's financial advisers, it was learned yesterday, have recommended to him a vast new spending program of such self-liquidating projects as toll roads and bridges.

The plan was submitted Wednesday by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board, Budget Director Harold D. Smith, and Chairman Frederic A. Delano of the National Resources Committee.

It envisioned establishment of a Federal toll authority to finance possibly a billion dollars' worth of road, bridges and other public works, and expansion of the lending activities of such agencies as the RFC and Commodity Credit Corporation.

Roosevelt's Attitude Unknown

The proposal would exclude the contemplated expenditures from ordinary Treasury bookkeeping, so that they would not affect either the regular budget deficit or direct Treasury debt.

Mr. Roosevelt suggested to Congress last January the advisability of separating loans for self-liquidating projects from regular Federal expenditures. His attitude toward the new proposal has not been made known.

The proposed toll authority would borrow money directly from the public. Its obligations would be carried on the books only as "contingent liabilities" of the Treasury—in other words, debts which the Treasury would not assume until and unless the authority was unable to pay them.

The RFC already is on such a self-financing basis. Altogether governmental corporations have a $5,000,000,000 debt which is not included in the $40,349,426,981 direct debt of the Treasury, known officially as the public debt.

Behind the new plan is the theory of Eccles that the stimulating effect of present deficit spending by the Government must not be withdrawn too suddenly or it will hurt business.

There were indications that the plan, if approved by the President, would not be submitted to Congress until next year.

Southern Railway Surgeons Honor Dr. F. W. Griffith

Dr. F. Webb Griffith, a native of Upper Marlboro, Md., who has been practicing surgery for 30 years in Asheville, N. C., was elected president of the Association of Surgeons, Southern Railway System, at the closing session yesterday.

Dr. James F. Mitchell and Miss Edith A. Foltz, both of Washington, were chosen as fourth vice president and secretary-treasurer, respectively.

Others elected were Dr. J. B. Johnston, of St. George, S. C.; Dr. Hugh Black, Spartanburg, S. C.; Dr. B. S. Lester, Birmingham, vice presidents; Dr. W. W. Harper, Selma, Ala., recording secretary; Dr. J. Marsh Frere, Chattanooga, Tenn., assistant recording secretary.

In a symposium on medical care which closed the three-day meeting at the Willard Hotel, Dr. Griffith criticized "the extravagant, wasteful methods proposed by the Wagner national health bill."

Text of Royal Farewells

Halifax, June 15 (Canadian Press).—Following are the texts of farewell addresses by King George and Queen Elizabeth today over an empire hook-up:

The King—

The time has come for the Queen and myself to say goodby to the people of Canada.

You have given us a welcome of which the memory will always be dear to us. In our travels across your great country, we have seen not a little of its infinite variety of natural wealth and natural beauty.

We have had the privilege of meeting Canadians, old and young, of many proud racial origins and in all walks of life. We hope we have made many friends among you.

"Our . . . Hearts Are Full"

We have had the opportunity, also, of crossing our border and paying an all too brief visit to Canada's great and friendly neighbor to the south. Our minds and hearts are full. We leave your shores after some of the most inspiring and illuminating weeks in our lives.

[The following paragraph was delivered in French.—Editor's note.]

My first duty is to thank you all from the bottom of my heart, in a very short time you have enabled us to see many things. We have to thank you not only for your personal kindness, but for the perfection of your arrangements. I must say, I think we have almost performed a miracle in surmounting the many difficulties presented by covering so vast a space in so limited a time.

I return to England with a new sense of the resources and of the responsibilities of our British Empire. I am confident that Canada has before her a development far beyond the most optimistic dreams of her pioneers. Her growth in material wealth is fully assured. For her sons and daughters, I wish her an even greater growth in the stature of mind and spirit. I go home with another thought, which is a comfort and an inspiration. From the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the tropics to the Arctic, lies a large part of the earth where there is no possibility of war between neighbors, whose peoples are wholly dedicated to the pursuits of peace, a pattern to all men of how civilized nations should live together. It is good to know that such a region exists, for what man can do once he can do again. By God's grace, yours may yet be the example which all the world will follow.

The Queen—

I cannot leave Canada without saying a word of farewell to you all, and thanking you for the wealth of affection that you have offered us throughout these unforgettable weeks.

"Memories . . . Will Never Dim"

Seeing this country, with all its varied beauty and interest, has been a real delight to me; but what has warmed my heart in a way I cannot express in words is the proof you have given us everywhere that you were glad to see us. And in return, I want particularly to tell the women and children of Canada how glad I am to have seen so many of them. Some, I know, came scores of miles to meet us, and that has touched me deeply. There were many others, I fear, whom distance, or illness, prevented from coming; to these I should like to send a special word of greeting—they have been always in my thoughts.

This wonderful tour of ours has given me memories that the passage of time will never dim. To the people of Canada and to all the kind people in the United States who welcomed us so warmly last week—to one and all on this great friendly continent, I say thank you. God be with you, and God bless you. Au revoir et Dieu vous benisse.

Penny-Wise Reforms

By Ernest K. Lindley

New Relief Program

IN PRESENTING the relief bill to the House, Representative Woodrum, acting chairman of the Appropriations Committee, described it as "a body blow at relief racketeers." It may be also a body blow at a more intelligent relief policy.

The purposes of certain of the requirements of the bill are sure to command widespread support; for example, the requirement that a worker who has been steadily employed by WPA for 18 months must take a "vacation." Considering the lack of jobs in private industry, it is not surprising that many workers have been on the WPA rolls steadily for a year or longer. Some of them may have come to look upon WPA as a "career." Anyway, as long as the funds are inadequate to provide jobs for all the needy unemployed, much can be said for making way for those on the waiting list by forcing a "vacation" on those who have been drawing WPA checks for 18 months.

The requirement that every WPA enrollee must work 130 hours a month for his security wage is in line with the original WPA plan of 1935. This was upset by the influence of organized craft workers, with the result that some of them have been earning their WPA checks with as few as 45 hours a month.

Some Restrictions May Hit Usefulness

BUT SOME of the other requirements, while backed by more or less plausible arguments, may restrict the usefulness of the work program. Apparently all WPA workers hereafter must be taken from the relief rolls. Under the existing law 10 per cent of the WPA workers can be enlisted from outside relief rolls. In practice, the percentage has been held below 5 per cent, and is now around 3 per cent. On some projects there has to be leeway for the employment of a few skilled workers who are jobless but have managed to remain off the relief rolls. Without these key workers the work could not be done. The effect of an ironclad prohibition against employing anybody who is not on relief would be to eliminate many of the better projects in favor of those which require only unskilled labor.

The bill limits WPA building projects to those costing not more than $25,000. This would cut out four-fifths of the present WPA building projects. The House committee wants the larger projects to be handled by PWA, and for that purpose has earmarked $125,000,000 out of the sum asked by the President for WPA. The President himself attempted to draw this line of division back in 1935 when WPA was first set up. As a rule larger buildings can be erected more efficiently by private contractors through PWA.

Cultural Programs Reduced Most

BUT THE PRESIDENT'S rule broke down, partly because of the aggressiveness of WPA, encouraged by local sponsors who preferred WPA because they did not have to put up so much of their own money as they did for PWA projects. But, unfortunately, on account of debt limitations or other difficulties, many localities weren't, and aren't, able to borrow money for PWA projects. The effect of this $25,000 limitation on WPA is to eliminate some useful projects.

By abolishing the Federal theater program and requiring all other Federal art projects to have local sponsors, the relief bill closes out other lines of relief employment. The cultural values of these programs are immense, although it is questionable, to say the least, on how great a scale these types of employment should be provided out of relief funds. Col. Harrington, WPA administrator, has been cutting them down and he has proposed further reforms in their administration.

The net result, however, of abolishing or drastically reducing Federal art projects, on one side, and of interfering with useful construction projects, on the other side, is to push WPA back toward ditch-digging and "leaf-raking."

Some Of Reforms Are Penny-Wise

A SOUND POLICY would aim at getting the greatest value from work done by persons who are unemployed by private industry. Their idleness is everybody's loss. There is a loss, too, when they are put to work digging ditches when there is more useful public work to be done. It would be economical to spend more money; to employ more skilled workers who are unemployed privately but not on relief, to buy or rent better tools—nothing is more exasperating than seeing WPA workers working like coolies with hand shovels and wheelbarrows when the same work could be done more efficiently with steam shovels—and to finance larger projects.

And speaking of efficiency, who sold the House Appropriations Committee the idea that a three-man board is an efficient administrative agency?

The relief bill has its good points, but some of its "reforms" look suspiciously like the penny-wise variety.

Canada And Britain

By Raleigh Parkin

The Dominion Seeks Neutrality Rights

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Montreal.

IN CANADA as in the United States, there exists isolationist sentiment in regard to European affairs. In both countries this sentiment is a not unnatural consequence amongst a people living on a continent which both geographically and spiritually is in many respects remote from the present main center of disturbance—Europe.

Discussion of neutrality has also existed in both countries, but here the situation is essentially different. When Americans advocate neutrality legislation they are discussing ways and means of pursuing a policy of neutrality which will prevent the United States from being drawn into war. When Canadians discuss "the neutrality issue," it is only a tiny minority who are trying to embark the country on a "policy" of neutrality in any major war in which Great Britain might be engaged. The overwhelming majority of such Canadians are discussing something entirely different—namely their "right to neutrality"—or, more accurately, their right as a self-governing people only to be committed on the vital issues of peace and war by a government directly responsible to them and not, as is still the case, by a government responsible only to an electorate who inhabit a country on the other side of the Atlantic.

Such Canadians believe that they are failing to live up to British traditions if they do not insist that they, as British subjects living in Canada, should have the same rights and shoulder the same responsibilities as do their fellow British subjects living in Great Britain.

IT MAY COME as a surprise to the many Americans who think of Canada as for all practical purposes independent of Great Britain to know that in this vital issue of peace and war Canadians do not enjoy the sovereign autonomy which is possessed by every other state—great or small—in the Americas.

In the year 1939 Canada finds herself, in practice, in the same colonial relationship to Great Britain, so far as foreign policy is concerned, as she was in up to and including 1914. Today, if a government in Great Britain should declare war or have war declared against her by another country, Canada will automatically find herself in the status of a belligerent, against whom the enemy state may proceed to act in the various ways usual when a state of war exists.

This situation has begun to arouse the anxious attention of many Canadians who are deeply concerned to maintain Canadian national unity at home, to promote the continuance of effective co-operation within the British commonwealth, and who believe that only by the maintenance and complete development in Canada of traditional British forms of responsible government can either of these two objectives be achieved.

This concern found expression last March in a public statement issued by a representative group of professional, business and academic men from all parts of Canada entitled "Canadian Unity in War and Peace—An Issue of Responsible Government." The situation, as seen by this group, is expressed in words quoted from a speech of Premier MacKenzie King on May 24, 1938:

"We have worked out a satisfactory and enduring solution of the relations between the several members of the British commonwealth in peace time; we have not yet worked out a completely logical solution of the position in war time."

THEY POINT OUT that while the statute of Westminster of 1931 gave Canada full power to make any laws she desires, the failure of this statute to make any mention of the royal prerogative under which foreign affairs are carried on, and the fact that it only affected Canadian laws for the future, involves the continuance of the old colonial status of automatic belligerency. Even those who believe that the statute of Westminster confers full sovereign powers on Canada and therefore, by implication, such attributes of sovereignty as the right to decide on issues of peace and war, agree that foreign states might reasonably be in doubt as to the exact position.

The issue raises important constitutional questions relating to the divisibility of the Crown, and the exercise of the royal prerogative by Dominion ministers. It points to the necessity, under all the circumstances, of the Dominion passing legislation that will clarify this situation beyond any doubt in the eyes of the world and at the same time make responsible self-government as real in external affairs as in domestic affairs.

THEY SHOW clearly that Mr. MacKenzie King's oft-repeated statement that Canada will not be committed in advance and that "Parliament will decide" means no more than that Parliament will merely decide for a country already technically at war and entangled by the acts of war and the effects of propaganda, the extent of initial assistance in men and money to be given to Great Britain. Neither the Parliament nor the people of Canada will have taken a truly responsible and democratic part in a decision that may affect the destinies of the country for a generation or more.

The foregoing is only the briefest account of an exceedingly able statement on the problem of self-government in the British Commonwealth. Canada, following along the path already blazed by Eire and South Africa, would only be attempting to "complete a century of gradual development of domestic control over all aspects of Canadian domestic and foreign affairs. To assert this final democratic right is a natural conclusion to her development into a sovereign nation, linked by feelings of sentiment and a common crown to other British peoples."

Perhaps the most interesting feature of the discussion that has raged in public and private over this statement is the revelation afforded of the curiously illogical stand taken by the politically powerful group of conservative English-speaking Canadian "imperialists."

Almost without exception they and their press condemn the arguments regarding self-government and the proposal for clarifying legislation. Yet the statement quotes as a major support for its arguments from the very recent words of two leading English imperialists, Mr. Lionel Curtis, the founder of the Round Table group, and Lord Tweedsmuir, the present governor general of Canada, pointing out that neither of these authorities could be described as having for their aim the destruction of the real bonds which today hold the British commonwealth together.

LORD TWEEDSMUIR, speaking in Montreal in October, 1937, had said that "A Canadian's first loyalty is not to the British commonwealth of nations but to Canada and Canada's King;" and again, Canada "is a sovereign nation and cannot take her attitude to the world docilely from Britain . . ." and again, "a sovereign people must, as part of its sovereign duty, take up its own attitude to world problems."

One of Mr. Curtis' statements in his recent book, "Civitas Dei," is even more emphatic. "The Dominions . . . cannot acquire it (the character of national commonwealths) until they have accepted in unequivocal terms the responsibility for peace or war. They cannot do this, nor feel they have done it, until they have notified to the world at large that they are not involved in war till their own governments have officially declared that they are so involved."

Twenty years ago the late Sir Robert Borden, the great Canadian nationalist and Conservative leader, and the late Lord Milner both put on record in unequivocal terms their conviction that only by a relentless development of autonomy to its fullest extent could the association known as the British commonwealth be preserved. British history has proved more than once, despite contemporary conservative fears, that the severing of a legal bond has only served to enhance actual co-operation.

The present issue is no more than the old problem in a new form. The British tradition demands that self-government in the dominions be carried to its logical conclusion if the commonwealth association is to remain more than an empty form.

More Honorary Degrees For 1939

Gilletts, Duncan H. (tropical fish raiser and service station mechanic).—We have checked up on you carefully through 1939 and found, as reported, that not once in tuning up and going over an automobile, on its first free service, did you climb all over it with greasy hands and shoes, smearing every inch of the upholstery with adhesive lubricants. You washed your hands first and kept your feet on the floor. No other case like yours has ever been reported and found true. Stay for a milk punch, Duncan.

Stewkesbury, Jarvis R. (legislator, oboe player and bee fancier).—A member of the United States Senate, you did not deliver radio talks urging strict economy in national finance and then vote millions for every cockeyed scheme that came before you. You gave to America the astonishing spectacle of a legislator who could be on the level with himself and his country. When approached by pressure groups you looked them squarely in their beady eyes and said, "Outside, polecats! I know your type!" Senator, you are the Man of 1939.

Dollop, Prentice W. (second chef, amateur gambler and follower of the ponies).—For three successive years you took tickets in the Irish Sweepstakes and always signed the name "Prentice W. Dollop" and ignored all impulses to put it down as "Never Won Yet," "Come to Papa," "Baby Needs Shoes," "Can Use It" or "How I Need It." This alone makes you a standout among the men of today. Do you wish your degree in blue or red?

Bernbloom, Jacob G. (pinochle player and hat manufacturer).—Mr. Bernbloom, we are proud to honor so unusual a man. You were one of the country's largest manufacturers of women's hats. You refused, however, to produce any of the weird, screwy and ridiculous models designed during the past two years. It ruined you, but you stuck to the attitude, "I wouldn't be a party to letting the women make fools of themselves, win, lose or draw." Take two degrees and cut yourself a piece of pie.

Dingwall, Wilkey Z. (angler, violinist and architect).—You were asked to design a building for a world's fair. You did so. It was recognizable immediately as a building and in no way resembled a merging of a spiral starway, a giant nutcracker and a super bus station gone wrong. If built, nobody would have had to ask a policeman what it was. Your design was rejected, of course, and instead of bothering any more about it you dropped the whole damned business.

Methodists Told to Shape Social Mind

Task to Be Test Of Unity, Baltimore Conference Warned By Bishop Straughn

One of the greatest responsibilities facing united Methodism is the imposing of a social mind upon America, Bishop James H. Straughn said last night at the Baltimore Annual Conference of the former Methodist Episcopal Church, its 150th and last.

Former president of the old Methodist Protestant Church, he spoke at Douglas Memorial Church, sharing the program with Bishop Jashwant R. Chitambar, of India, who said that Christianity was bringing a religious, social, industrial and economic awakening to his country.

Asserting that the evangelistic mind and social mind cannot be separated, Bishop Straughn advised that "what the Methodist Church, and all churches needed was the simple proposition of bringing men to God."

In spite of Methodist unification, the Methodists are still on trial, Bishop Straughn warned, and have yet to prove that union will work, "down where people really live." There are still pessimistic voices saying "just wait," he added.

Attired in a black clerical robe and a tan and blue turban, Bishop Chitambar, who attended the recent Kansas City conclave, said that the increasing general influence of Christianty in India was more significant than numerical growth, and that the situation for Christianity looked "more hopeful than in any time in the country's history."

The conference, 150th and last of the former Methodist Episcopal Church, and which is meeting through Sunday, earlier in the day heard a report approved deploring the "encroachment of unnecessary labor and commercialized amusements on Sabbath observance."

"The church cannot compromise with an invasion of the Lord's Day that violates the fundamental principles of worship and rest," said the report, which was presented and adopted after Dr. W. W. Davis, general secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance of Maryland, blamed "legislative courtesy" for the defeat of the Sunday closing law in Maryland during the 139th General Assembly.

It may be necessary to settle many problems growing out of unification in friendly court suits, Dr. Thomas A. Stafford, of Chicago, executive secretary of the board of pensions, contended in his report. He said he felt that the general property of the church may be transferred without any serious difficulty.

Rearrangement of conference boundaries was another topic of discussion at the conference, which will hear a devotional address this morning by Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, who welcomed the delegates yesterday. The Rev. Clarence H. V. Corkran is host pastor.

A social service banquet at 6 p. m., at Douglas, with Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, speaking, and an address by Bishop Hughes on "Children of the Manse" at 8 p. m. will highlight today's program. Several of the sessions will be held at Ninth Street Christian Church.

Triplets, Twins Capture Glory In Style Show

Others Win Prizes, But Youngsters Win Plaudits of Crowd

A set of 2-year-old triplets dressed in costumes designed by their mother, and a pair of twins walked off with the plaudits if not the prizes in the fashion show and awards night by the Abbott School of Art.

Miss Helen Harsoulas, who also was honored for completing a two-year course in one and a half years, won first prize for her "mix-it-as-you-please" dress, consisting of a blue check skirt, a red jacket, a red turban and white slacks. The winner designed, illustrated and made the costume.

The triplets were Jean, Joyce and Julianne Armstrong, who wore costumes designed and made by their mother, Mrs. Iantha Armstrong, a pupil at the school. The twins were Ann and Frances Mason, both Abbott pupils. Ann wore a dress designed in 1863 by the French export, Worth. Frances wore a play dress fashioned after the older model.

A scholarship for high school students was awarded to Miss Mary B. Hillberg, of Woodrow Wilson High. Two half scholarships to the summer school were awarded to Miss Elizabeth Upton and Charles Hoover. A scholarship in the fashion illustration class went to Miss Christine Thoroe.

Those awarded certificates for successful completion of the three year course were Miss Jewel McNab, Warren Feldman and Miss Barbara Means.

Associates Give Farewell Fete for Canon, Mrs. Stokes

Canon and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, who will leave within a fortnight to make their home at their country place, Brook Farm, in Lenox, Mass., were guests of honor at a farewell dinner given last evening by the retiring canon's associates on the staff of the National Cathedral. More than 50 guests assembled in the garden of the Parrot Tea Room, where dinner was served at 7 o'clock.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, spoke informally in recognition of the services performed for the cathedral since Canon and Mrs. Stokes came here 15 years ago. He expressed particular pleasure that Canon Stokes will continue as a member of the cathedral chapter and that Mrs. Stokes will be in touch with the program of the National Cathedral Association through the Women's Committee in Western Massachusetts.

Dean Noble C. Powell presented on behalf of the staff a fountain pen to Canon Stokes and gave Mrs. Stokes a set of finger bowls made from the same colorful glass which had been used by Lawrence B. Saint in designing stained glass windows for the cathedral fabric.

Cosmopolitan Club Hears Program by Hecht Choristers

A program of semiclassical and modern selections was presented by the Hecht Choristers, a mixed group of 40 voices, at a meeting of the Cosmopolitan Club at the Carlton Hotel yesterday.

In a talk on the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth, the Rev. Oliver Hart, club chaplain, praised the enthusiastic reception with which District residents received Their Majesties.

"They cheered, not because some dictator told them to, but because they thought it was the proper thing—because they wanted to cheer," the Rev. Mr. Hart asserted.

Altmeyer and Dykstra Rumored Agency Head

The name of Clarence Dykstra, president of the University of Wisconsin, was mentioned yesterday along with that of Arthur J. Altmeyer as a possible selection to head the new Federal Security Agency, which comes into existence July 1 under the terms of President Roosevelt's first Government reorganization order.

Murphy Discloses Plan to Overhaul Bankruptcy Rules

Attorney General Murphy revealed yesterday that the Justice Department was planning to overhaul bankruptcy and receivership machinery, and contemplating the creation of "standing liquidators" in place of receivers of bankrupt concerns.

Proposals which a special staff of the department is developing, he said, are another step in the program for divorcing the Federal judiciary from politics.

Murphy has recommended to Congress that referees in bankruptcy be placed on a salary instead of a fee basis. A standing liquidator likewise would be a salaried court officer. Federal judges thus no longer could name receivers and fix their fees.

Tuskegee Quintet Presents Recital At Shiloh Church

The male quintet of Tuskegee Institute was presented at Shiloh Baptist Church last night in a recital of Negro Folk music and Southland sketches before a large audience, in which many alumni of the Alabama institution were in evidence.

The program opened with "The Viking Song" (S. Coleridge Taylor), followed by the "Where'er You Walk" (Handel), "Lassie O' Mine" (Walz) and Bartholomew's "The Battle of Jericho." Dialect readings from Dunbar were given by Willis Brown, a member of the quintette.

Among the spirituals best received were the well-known "Soon-A-Will-Be-Done" (Dawson), "Deep River" (Burleigh) and Kerns' "Old Man River." Miss Edythe Mae Johnstone, at the piano, returned for an encore after her rendition of R. Nathaniel Dett's "Mammy." Frank P. Chisolm, field secretary, spoke on the work of the Tuskegee Institute.

Lively as Ever at 50, Sousa's Post March Stirs D. C. Hearts

ever until it came to the Marines' own song, The Halls of Montezuma and closed with The Star Spangled Banner. Midway of the program, Leader Santelmann turned and faced the crowd.

"We now come," he said, "to the focal point of tonight's celebration. The next number will be one of the most famous of Sousa's compositions, The Washington Post March."

A burst of applause ringed the Memorial and it slowly died while the softly lighted dome seemed to brighten with the dimming day and throw into bolder relief the tall white columns against the blue coats of the band and its glittering instruments. And into the growing light burst the first strains of that march Sousa wrote in 1889 to celebrate an essay contest of The Washington Post and whose instant and prolonged success amazed even him.

Sousa was there in his music from the time he was a slim, dreamy-eyed youth playing in the old Marine Band where his father also played. Sousa was there in the days when he was leader of that band, a heavy set man with a majestic beard that flowed down his braided coat.

And there was the Sousa of the later years, the graying band leader and composer, dignified, with his clipped mustache and the military carriage that was his until the end of his life in 1932.

The band played his "Sheridan's Ride," with its ringing bugle calls, its crash of battle and peal of a trumpet in the distance sounding "Taps," which carried many a man and many a woman far back and beyond that place and that night.

They played two Sousa suits—"Three Quotations," in three of the composer's moods, and his "Looking Upward," with its two parts, "By the Light of the Polar Star" and "Under the Southern Cross,"—as far far from war and marching as any composer has ever been.

But altogether, it was Sousa as the public knows and loves him; Sousa of the booming basses, the thumping drums and the singing brasses, and the crowd took away with it the martial moods of the March King.

Later in the evening the story of how Souza wrote The Washington Post March, with a dramatization of the famous composer's life, was presented in the WJSV broadcast at 10:30 p. m. Roosevelt High School's prize-winning band played "The Washington Post March," the McKinley Band played "El Capitan," Armstrong Band, "The Thunderer," and Western High's Band, "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

Meanwhile The Washington Post March became the theme song of anniversary day in the city's cinema palaces and night spots.

Naval Academy Orders Inquiry In Surname Case

Annapolis, June 15 (AP).—Investigation of reports that Midshipman Jay Allen Einstein's superiors advised him to change his name to avoid the "handicap" of a Jewish surname was ordered today at the Naval Academy.

The office of Rear Admiral Wilson Brown, superintendent, made the bare announcement of the inquiry. Second Classman Einstein is at sea on the annual summer cruise, and the superintendent's office would not amplify the statement until the midshipman has been questioned.

Jay Allen Einstein, sr., White Plains ((N.Y.) mail order merchant, yesterday told Judge John A. McKenna there that his son had been "informed by his superiors that his opportunities would be 'greatly enlarged' if his name were changed."

At Washington Representative Bloom (Democrat), of New York, said today he was "greatly surprised" at Einstein's statement.

Bloom appointed Einstein's son to Annapolis last year.

Capital News In Brief

Steve Early Now a Photog

The White House news photographers, known from here to there as one of the hardest-boiled crews of citizens extant, got soft yesterday. They chipped together, bought, and presented Stephen T. Early, the President's secretary, and the man who tells them what's what and what's not, with a solid gold photographer's badge, suitably engraved and decorated with blue enamel.

Happy Steve, really touched, mused aloud:

"All I need now is a camera."

Dr. Freeman Asks Unity to Curb Bigotry

Bishop Addresses Golden Jubilee Dinner of American Rabbis' Conference

A plea for union of all religions to combat the spread of racial prejudice was made last night by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, addressing the golden jubilee dinner of the Central Conference of American Rabbis at the Mayflower.

The problem of racial prejudice is not a problem of Judaism, protestantism or Romanism, but a common one, the prelate said, adding that America holds a key position in the situation.

"Our insularity makes us a key Nation," he declared, "and whatever happens in the Old World is largely affected by our attitude in the New World. No religious body, no matter how strong, how autonomous, can afford to stand alone."

Urges "Common Denominator"

The prelate insisted that "we need a common denominator," and contended "it is impossible for any religious body to feel security in standing alone."

"Some kind of a federation embracing forces representing religion upon the American continent is needed," the bishop insisted. "Revolutionary movements of our times are leveling attacks on all religious movements. Unity of action is indispensable against the forces that conspire to defeat us."

"We've got to unite to do what the allies did in the great crisis of the World War under Marshal Foch," he declared.

Rabbi Jonah Wise Speaks

Shortly before the prelate's message, Rabbi Jonah Wise gave reminiscences on the life of his father, the late Rabbi Isaac M. Wise, founder of the Central Conference and also of the Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati.

Dr. Edward N. Calish, of Richmond, said both Protestants and Catholics were starting to "uphold our hands."

Cookies, Salads and Puddings Win Prizes in Recipe Contest

Cereals Now Are Toasted In Great Ovens

Sea Food Salad Is Very Nice; So Is A Crunchy Medley

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor

POST RECIPE contestants are not the kind who, when they go into the kitchen to cook supper, fix the hamburger and fried potatoes and stewed tomatoes in the same old way, to the last dust of pepper, because they have always cooked them that way. They know that their grandmothers dared to use their peacocks for roasting as well as for decoration, and that they too must use initiative in lifting the every-day foods out of the rut. Life has changed in many ways since our grandmothers wrote down the "rule" for making their favorite dishes. One of the greatest strides in the food realm is the processing of cereals. Cereals are now toasted in great traveling ovens, then dried and packaged in moisture-proof cartons to insure a sanitary, crisp condition when consumed.

A thrilling adventure in food progress and the crystallization of modern food manufacturing was found in my Post Recipe Box this week, for it was overflowing with recipes for the utilization of prepared cereals as submitted by The Post food-page readers.

The Cookie Jar

Into every life there comes a cookie time. Most people from the hungry little tots hurrying in from school or play, to the grown-ups who like a bedtime snack, make for the cookie jar. Mrs. M. Hook, of 313 Douglas street northeast, is one of the housewives who serves bulk in the family diet, in a way that brought to her the first prize of $3 in this week's Post Recipe Contest. Whole bran cookies made from the recipe submitted by Mrs. Hook are full of nourishment, delightful crunchiness and novel deliciousness.

MRS. M. HOOK

Whole Bran Cookies

Sift 2 cups flour, and measure. Add 3 teaspoons baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt, and sift again. Add 1½ cups whole bran shreds. Cream ½ cup butter thoroughly, add ½ cup peanut butter and cream together until smooth. Add ½ cup brown sugar, firmly packed and 1½ cups granulated sugar gradually, creaming well. Add 2 unbeaten eggs and beat thoroughly. Add the flour mixture alternately with 3 tablespoons milk, mixing well. Shape into cookies and roll in waxed paper. Chill overnight. Bake on ungreased baking sheet in hot oven, 400 degrees, for 8 minutes, until done. Makes 6 dozen cookies and they are fine for children.

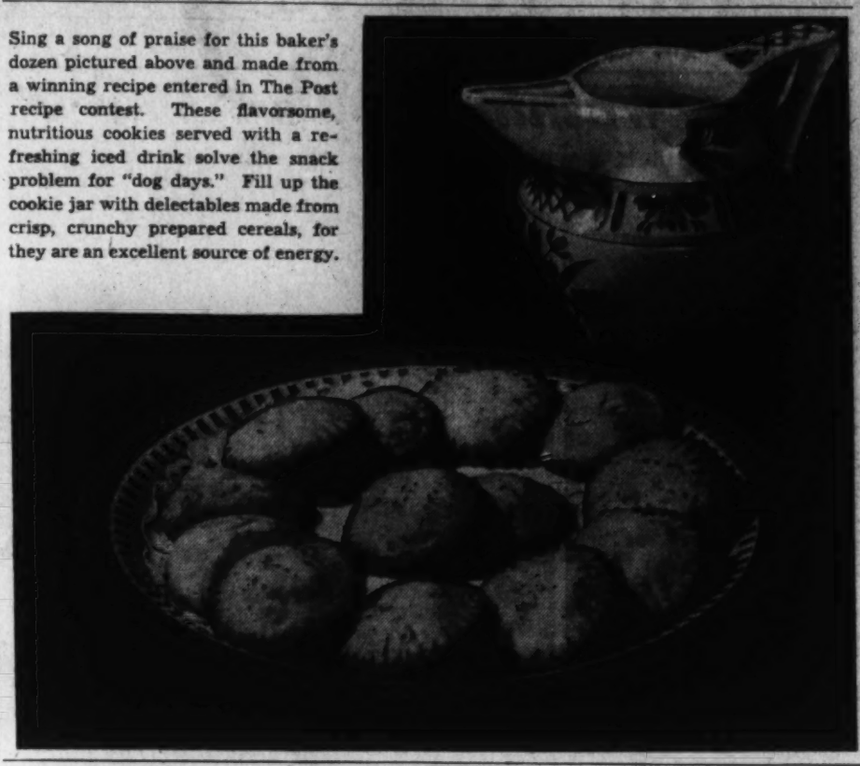
Fish 'n' Corn

Each year the Iroquois Indians celebrated with feast and thanks-giving for four days the Great Spirit who had given them maize, for they prized their corn very highly. This cereal since that time has evolved into many interesting forms. Mrs. Frank D. Ebel, 906 Prince street, Alexandria, uses corn flakes as an ingredient to make an unusual sea food dish. Because of this novel suggestion Mrs. Ebel wins the second prize of $2.

MRS. EBEL

Sea Food Salad

Combine ½ cup chopped green pepper, ¼ cup chopped onion, 1 cup chopped celery, 1 cup cooked flaked crabmeat, 1 cup cooked shrimp, 1 cup mayonnaise, ½ teaspoon salt and 1 teaspoon Worcestshire sauce and mix well. Place the mixture in individual shells or a shallow baking dish. Cover with 2 cups corn flakes which have been toasted in ¼ cup butter. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, about 30 minutes. Sprinkle with paprika and serve with slices of lemon—6 to 8 servings.



Sing a song of praise for this baker's dozen pictured above and made from a winning recipe entered in The Post recipe contest. These flavorsome, nutritious cookies served with a refreshing iced drink solve the snack problem for "dog days." Fill up the cookie jar with delectables made from crisp, crunchy prepared cereals, for they are an excellent source of energy.

Recipe Contest

THEME—Squash, ways to prepare.

CLOSING DATE—Noon, Saturday, June 24.

PRIZES—First, $3; second, $2; third, fourth, fifth, $1 each.

Crunchy Medley

Grapenuts, a pioneer among ready-to-eat cereals, lends its unique flavor and crisp texture to a pudding and wins for its author a $1 prize. Mrs. Pauline Crow, 1910 T street southeast, features grapenuts in a fragile pudding with a crusty surface, and says 'tis at its very best when chilled and served with whipped cream.

MRS. CROW

Jellied Fruit Pudding

Soften 1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin in ¼ cup cold water; dissolve in 1½ cups hot water. Add 2 tablespoons lemon juice and ½ cup sugar, stirring until sugar dissolves. Chill until partially firm. Add 2 cups grapenuts, 1 cup chopped, packaged figs, ½ cup seeded raisins and ½ cup broken walnut meats. Pour into 6 by 10-inch mold; chill until firm. Cut in squares and top with whipped cream. Serves 6.

Indian Dessert

Lace-like ribbons coiled into delicately tanned "pillows" emerge from their breakfast status as shredded wheat biscuits to the pivotal ingredient of a delicious nutritious pudding. Mrs. Lila H. Griest, 1517 A street northeast, sent in her recipe for a Mock Indian Pudding, and wins a $1 prize.

Mock Indian Pudding

Soak 3 shredded wheat biscuits in 3 cups of milk for about ½ hour. Add 1 egg, ¾ cup of molasses, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon ginger, ½ teaspoon ground nutmeg, ¾ cup seeded raisins and 3 tablespoons sugar. Place in a greased baking dish and dot with butter. Bake for 1 hour in a moderate oven. Serve with hard sauce or whipped cream.

Pantry Favorite

Miss Sylvia Klein, Procurement Division, U. S. Treasury, placed her bet on oatmeal as a favorite to win in the use of cereals in cookery. Miss Klein's recipe for pecan oatmeal cookies fulfills all the requirements for a delicious cooky, because of the food value of the oatmeal, and the crispness and flavor imparted by both the cereal and the nuts. The award of $1 is given for this cooky recipe.

MISS KLEIN

Pecan Oatmeal Cookies

Mix 1½ cups rolled oats, ½ cup brown sugar, ¾ cup white flour, 1 teaspoon salt and ½ teaspoon cinnamon together. Add ½ teaspoon soda, dissolved in ½ cup boiling water and then ½ cup butter or other melted shortening. Add ½ cup chopped pecans and mix well. Chill. Roll out very thin on slightly floured board. Cut with cooky cutter, and bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees from 12 to 15 minutes. This makes about 30 cookies.

Fruit Plates Please Eye and Tempt Palate

By The Post Food Editor.

FRUIT PLATES seem to be an expression of summer. Certainly nothing could be more of a treat to the eye and palate than the bright colors, appealing fragrance and haunting flavors of fruit. Then, too, their splendid nutritive value places them in the first rank as beneficial food.

The combinations of fruit flavors and colors are endless, but there are a few that stand out when used as the main course at a luncheon or as an accompaniment in contrast to the rest of a dinner. A centerpiece of fruits, served the Italian way, arranged in gay pottery or a sparkling glass dish, with broken pieces of ice and here and there leafy green sprigs of mint or watercress, makes a lovely picture.

Cubes of melon, pineapple and ripe pears, flavored and sweetened with a favorite wine, sum up to a delightful Italian macedonia. Peeled nectarines, with sauterne poured over them, in chilled half-pineapples; a silver bowl of black cherries, melon balls and a few blackberries and a sprinkling of kirsch are also appealing combinations. On a background of grape, geranium or lettuce leaves, arrange pineapple gems rolled in mint, quater-inch slices of bananas dipped in lemon or orange juice and then rolled in chopped nuts, strawberries dusted with powdered sugar, and two or three small cheese balls, made either of cottage cheese with chives and paprika or cream cheese mixed with Roquefort. Serve thoroughly chilled on attractive salad plates with a zestful dressing and there will be little left to be desired for a summer salad.

New Use for Coat Hanger

Now that the out-of-door season is with us, weiner and marshmallow forks will be in demand. Such implements may be made at home by bending the triangular part of a wire coat hanger into a handle, straightening the hook.

Youthful 'Barnum' Is Success With Garage Circus

The "Big Top" was a garage in the rear of his home and most of the "star attractions" were Peter Martin, 9, the "one-man circus," of 3902 Ingomar street. Here's the troop in the garage

His Circus a $2 Success, Peter, 9, Gives Free Lemonade

So Peter Martin, aged 9, must have burrowed his shock of red hair in a pillow last night and gone off to expansive dreams of himself as Barnum and a circus so big that the garage behind his house would never hold it.

Peter Martin demonstrated yesterday that a circus can pay if properly managed and the show is good enough. His circus in the garage at his house, 3902 Ingomar street, cleared $2. Peter, dressed only in red swimming shorts, went directly to the box office after the show, counted the "take" while his eyes held back something that maybe was:

"Well, I'm a success. The Greatest Show On Earth dropped $40,000 one year and I'm ahead two bucks."

Gives Away Lemonade

Peter Martin then went to the lemonade stand and declared the profits sufficient for one day. "We'll give away the rest of it today," he cried with an arching arm sweep. The 20 children, the bulk of his audience of 30, swarmed in. The lemonade disappeared.

Success oozed from the pores of Peter Martin, and some of it honest sweat. He had worked; had been the elephant in his circus, and the snake charmer too. The elephant was Peter Martin in a great elephant suit; the snake charmer, Peter Martin, whistling, cajoling and making oboe sounds to a strip of vacuum cleaner hose. He had been the press agent who bombarded the neighborhood with handbills, saying:

"Come! A stupendous show The Neighborhood Famous Circus. Attend this magnificent show. Plan to come to this unusual show and view humorous as well as amazing acts."

Then he took the phone and called The Washington Post. 'If you'll send a reporter out we will give him a free ticket and a free glass of lemonade. "That's the way to get 'em, Peter knew. Slip the old Annie Oakley to 'em.

Imagination Exercised

But the paying customers sat in improvised tiers before the garage door. They looked upon a trapeze, with a mattress for a net, and a few bright trappings. Martha Jane Reading, 11, wore a Yankee Doodle suit and announced events from an upturned orange crate. "When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for us to improvise a circus . . . " she went on, and out stepped Jackie Knightman, 9, with his dog, Mickey, and his ducks, Donald and Popsyckle.

The announcer explained that Mickey would climb a stepladder and slide down a slide, but there was neither contrivance there so the public's imagination was requested. Then the ducks cavorted and Mickey leaped through a hoop. Nancy Martin did her stunts on the flying trapeze, hanging by her knees and blowing up a balloon all the while. And then 5-year-old Mary Martin began training the elephant who was Peter Martin. A clown came out and walked a tight wire, that a chalk line on the floor. The children roared.

"You put on a great show," an elderly neighbor said, drawing the pipe from his mouth.

"Free lemonade now," Peter was crying. Then he said "Thank you." But there were bigger shows in his eyes.

Blackmail Suspect Convicted Here

A District Court jury yesterday deliberated only 15 minutes to convict of blackmail Edward J. Furey, who had insisted on acting as his own counsel—despite the urging of Justice Adkins, who wished to assign a lawyer to defend him.

Furey was tried on charges of obtaining $3,000 from a Navy Yard employe after accusing him of immoral practices. It was charged also that he impersonated an officer to obtain the cash.

Winds Fan 4 Forest Fires in Rockies

By the United Press.

Hundreds of volunteers, CCC enrollees and reservation Indians were mobilized last night to fight a series of forest fires which already had destroyed thousands of acres of valuable timberland in the Rocky Mountain region.

The fires, fanned by winds which ranged up to 60 miles an hour, raged on four major fronts in Colorado, Wyoming and New Mexico.

Stark Nominated To Succeed Leahy As U.S. Navy Head

President Roosevelt yesterday nominated Rear Admiral Harold R. Stark to be chief of naval operations, the Navy's highest ranking post.

BUTTRICK

Stark would succeed Admiral William D. Leahy, who will retire from the Navy when Congress adjourns and become Governor of Puerto Rico. The 58-year-old new chief now is on leave, having recently been relieved as commander of cruisers, battle force. He will have the rank of admiral for a term of four years if confirmed.

At the same time, Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz was sworn in as chief of the Bureau of Navigation. He relieves Rear Admiral James O. Richardson, who will become commander of the battle force, with rank of admiral, June 24.

LYMAN

Marine Corps Headquarters here announced that Maj. Gen. Charles H. Lyman, commander of the Marine Corps Department of the Pacific, and Brig. Gen. James T. Buttrick, commander of the Marine School at Quantico, had been ordered home, August 1, to await their retirement, October 1. Both officers reach the statutory age limit in September.

Politics Ban Bill Called Too Broad

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt was represented by callers yesterday as being "100 per cent in favor of the objectives" of the Hatch bill banning political activity by Federal officeholders, but as feeling that its language was too broad.

Representatives Celler (Democrat), of New York, and Healey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, members of the House Judiciary Committee, said after a White House conference: A literal interpretation of the bill's language forbidding any Federal official from using his office to "interfere with or affect the result of an election" would mean that the President or any member of his Cabinet could not make a political speech.

Murphy May Get Job for Heflin

Attorney General Murphy said yesterday he would like to get a job for former Senator Tom Heflin, Democrat, of Alabama.

Asked at his press conference whether Tom Heflin was "getting a job," the Attorney General said, "that has not been determined yet."

16-Year-Old Flies 930 Miles Solo

Chicago, June 15 (AP).—Dick James, a 16-year-old high school junior with a wide grin, a flair for flying and a record of only 48 hours in the air alone, completed a leisurely solo flight from Denver today.

He landed his tiny blue monoplane at the Municipal Airport, hopped out and reported his first long cross-country flight—approximately 930 miles—was so uneventful that he tuned in radio programs for amusement. His elapsed time was 32 hours 10 minutes.

Mrs. Vincent Gets 8 Years in Death Of Son-in-Law

Mrs. Mallie V. Vincent, 45, Seat Pleasant (Md.) clubwoman, was sentenced yesterday at Upper Marlboro to eight years in the Maryland Penitentiary on a charge of manslaughter in the fatal shooting of her son-in-law, Michael Mattia, 35.

Sentence was imposed by Circuit Court Judge William M. Loker before an almost empty courtroom. Sentence was moved up a day when Mrs. Vincent expressed the hope her friends would not be present to see her.

A few minutes before, Mrs. Vincent heard her attorneys argue unsuccessfully for a new trial. She was pale but composed.

Neither her husband, Harry B. Vincent, nor her daughter, Mrs. Pauline Mattia, widow of the slain man, was in the courtroom.

Mrs. Vincent admitted shooting her son-in-law in an argument over an electric light bill, April 8, but pleaded self-defense.

Defense Attempts To Link Alderman To Miss Lamour

Hollywood, June 15 (U.P.).—An attempt to show that Myrl Alderman carried on a flirtation with lissome Dorothy Lamour was made today at the trial of his former wife's $150,000 alienation of affections suit against his present spouse, blonde Ruth Etting.

The suggestion that Alderman was smitten by the brunette charms of Hollywood's sarong originator was advanced by defense counsel during cross-examination of Mrs. Alma Alderman, who alleges that Miss Etting set her cap for the young composer-pianist-bullfrog raiser and lined it with attractive gifts as a lure.

Attorney Bernard B. Cohen pointedly asked Mrs. Alderman if it were not a fact that she once told her divorced husband that she suspected him of going with Miss Lamour. The attractive blonde witness firmly replied, "No."

Marine Board Denies U. S. Paid for Dinners

The Maritime Commission denied yesterday that Government funds were used to finance the "$10-a-plate" banquets which Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, told the Senate recently were being given by the American President Lines to attract business for its round-the-world service.

Moreover, Chairman Emory S. Land informed Senator Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina, that the company's management pursued a "proper" course in giving the dinners. The average cost of the dinners, said Land, was not $10 but "approximately $5 per plate."

Albany, N. Y. June 16 (U.P.).—The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court tonight invalidated New York's 1939-1940 budget, which would become effective July 1, holding unconstitutional the methods used by the Republican legislature in reducing Democratic Gov. Lehman's original budget.

The court, in a 3-to-2 decision, ruled that the legislature had exceeded its authority in cutting his record $415,000,000 estimate to approximately $368,000,000.

France Now Ready For Any Menace, Bullitt Declares

By the Associated Press.

Ambassador William C. Bullitt told President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull today that France was now strong and united, and confident of its ability to meet any threat which might develop.

He conferred for nearly an hour this afternoon with Hull and saw Mr. Roosevelt at dinner tonight.

The Ambassador to Paris told reporters that in the last year Premier Daladier and Finance Minister Paul Reynaud had done wonders for France.

"The people are working," he said. "There were only 13 persons on strike in all France when I sailed. Financial conditions are much better. Confidence has been restored."

Social Notables Crowd Garden Tea As Betty Drayton Makes Her Bow

Debutante Is Dressed in White Marquisette, One Of Most Becoming Frocks of Season; Mother, In Cornflower Blue, as Lovely as Daughter

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor

OLD WASHINGTON came out of its collective cave in droves yesterday afternoon for the garden tea at which one of its favorite daughters, Miss Betty Drayton, made her bow to society.

The event was given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles de V. Drayton, at their home, 4625 Garfield street, from 5 to 7 o'clock, and the spacious terrace to the side and back of the attractive residence was a moving mass of social notables for every minute of that time, and long after the final hour.

Stepping out in a cloud of white marquisette—one of the most becoming frocks seen this season—the pretty debutante said "How do you do" to scores of her friends in the drawing room where she and her mother received. Her gown, a period model with a full skirt drawn in to a satin corselet, was fashioned with short sleeves set off with wide cuffs. An old-fashioned bouquet of white blossoms was a further attractive accent for her ensemble.

As lovely as her daughter was Mrs. Drayton, who was trimly turned out in a gown of cornflower blue marquisette, in tucked squares from hemline to neck, with a full skirt and puffed sleeves. Her bouquet, similar to the debutante's, was fringed with blue blossoms that blended with her frock.

Mr. Drayton, who, if he had followed the pattern of most fathers at debutante parties, would have been a forgotten man, was no such person yesterday. While his wife and daughter were greeting the long line of guests in the drawing room, he was doing his handshaking out on the front walk. Later, he mingled with the throng in the garden, moving gayly from one group to another, apparently having the time of his life.

Guests, who filed into the drawing room in a line that was almost continuous for more than two hours, moved on through the dining room and the sun porch to the cool terrace. On the way out, many stopped long enough, however, to admire the masses of flowers—baskets, bouquets and corsages—that had been sent to the debutante of the day and lined the walls three-deep in all directions.

Punch, ice cream, sandwiches and other tempting tea-time items were served at three tables in the garden, and the crowd revolved around each without showing partiality to any one. A few chairs scattered conveniently toward the front of the lawn were filled the entire time, the lucky persons in them holding little courts all their own.

A BEVY of debutantes and other friends of Miss Drayton assisted her, all wearing dainty frocks that swept the grass. Three in the group, Miss Joanna Huntington, Miss Joan Wilkinson and Miss Rosemary Merrill, made their bows last week. Another, Miss Patricia Hurley, will be presented tomorrow at a tea to be given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Hurley, at Belmont, their Virginia estate.

Miss Huntington was gowned in white embroidered marquisette with powder blue accents in the velvet ribbon around her slender waist and the tiny bows on her puffed sleeves. Miss Merrill had chosen a frock of yellow organza that contrasted nicely with her dark hair, and Miss Hurley had on a streamlined chartreuse costume, with a pencil blue scarf that matched her bracelet and sandals. Miss Wilkinson was in sky blue marquisette dotted with white and made with a full skirt and a smart little jacket. Others in the group were Miss Mary Gruman, Miss Edith Pearson, Miss Nancy Lee Masten, Miss Beatrice Rhett and Miss Katherine Popham.

AMONG THOSE assisting Mrs. Drayton were Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, whose pale blue lace frock was worn with a picture hat; Mrs. Edgar Edmonston, of Baltimore, whose all-white ensemble featuring a sweeping chiffon frock and wide-brimmed hat was most attractive; Mrs. William Chapin Huntington, in a frock of white and blue chiffon worn with white accessories; Mrs. David St. Pierre Gaillard, in white; Mrs. John D. Hyde, Mrs. Elmer R. Oliver, Miss Anna Green, Mrs. Samuel Dennis, of New York; Mrs. James A. Patton, Mrs. Sidney R. Prince, jr., Mrs. Smith Hempstone, Mrs. H. Chamber Oliphant, Mrs. Robert C. Watson, Mrs. John L. Proctor, Mrs. Gregory Prince, Miss Ann Lomax, Mrs. Rudolph Max Kauffmann, Mrs. John A. Sterrett, whose cool print frock was set off with a blending hat, and Mrs. George Maurice Morris, whose wide-brimmed black straw hat with its pencil blue veil was worn with a blue and white chiffon frock.

Incidentally, the latter's daughter, Miss Patricia Morris, who made her bow here last winter, is now on her way to Europe and will be in England and France through the summer, returning here in September. Meanwhile, Mr. and Mrs. Morris and their other children will be off soon to the West Coast, where he will attend the meeting of the American Bar Association.

SEEN IN THE CROWD: Mr. and Mrs. Keith Merrill, the latter wearing a simple frock of white embroidered sheer with a small hat; Mrs. Royal T. McKenna, in a snappy blue and white ensemble, accompanied by her daughter, Joan; Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Partridge 3d, threading their way through the throng . . . Mrs. Nathaniel Dial and Mrs. James F. Byrnes chatting with Dr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Bayne . . . Mr. and Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt, making the rounds quickly in order to get home in plenty of time to be ready and waiting for the guests at their dinner last evening . . . Mrs. Wilson Lee, a pretty picture in a yellow frock with matching hat . . . Dr. and Mrs. James Alexander Lyon, greeting friends on all sides and stopping to talk with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem and Miss Eleanor Meem.

STILL OTHERS THERE: Mrs. Gilbert Grovenor; Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, who are planning a trip to South America soon; Mrs. Edgar Prochnik, in a talkative twosome that included Mrs. Wallach Merriam; Mrs. Charles Stanley White, wearing a stunning white ensemble; Miss Dorothy Tirrell, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Max Kauffmann 2d, R. Walton Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Bradley and Miss Barbara Bradley, Hewitt Wells, Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken and dozens of others, including many members of the younger set, as well as a number of the debutante's schoolmates at Smith College, where she has just finished her freshman year.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

Society Writer Undergoes Examination On Her Knowledge of All the Questions

THE SOCIETY WRITER takes an examination for promotion:

Q. Describe the people one meets at Capital parties.

A. For most of us, they are charming. Some are vivacious, others glamorous, the rest friendly, hospitable or congenial. Everyone is amusing, and many are witty, but their wit is a kindly one.

Q. What do you call the clothes women wear at such functions?

A. Gowns, or occassionally frocks, but never dresses.

Q. Do the guests enjoy themselves?

A. Certainly. A marvelous, wonderful, cheery or amusing time is had by all.

Q. What are the sandwiches like at parties here?

A. The sandwiches are usually dainty, but they may also be paper-thin.

Q. What do dinners begin with?

A. A clear soup, which is always piping hot, except in summer, when it is jellied and refreshingly cold.

Q. Do you know anything about the cooks who prepare such delicacies?

A. Yes, the cook formerly served as chef at the Rumanian Legation.

Q. On arrival at a garden party, how do you greet the hostess?

A. You say either "What a perfect day for your tea," or, if the function is a large one, "Wasn't it lucky it didn't rain this afternoon?"

Q. What does one say when not invited to a party given for royalty?

A. One is often called out of town by a death in the family that day, and consequently has to say nothing. Failing this, you explain that you don't know why it is, but celebrities just don't interest you; that you wouldn't walk a block to look at a king; that after all, you met them in their own palace once, so why should you stand in a crush of people just for a peek; that you can't endure people who are impressed by royalty.

Q. If one isn't invited to parties given by the smart set, how does one explain it?

A. He or she is too busy cultivating the really worth-while, creative people of Washington—the kind who DO THINGS.

Q. Do people tell you they like your stories?

A. No, because almost everybody hates to see his name in the paper. However, as they say they never read the society columns, perhaps you can get away safely with mentioning them.

Q. How do you describe a cocktail party where 50 people are standing wedged in a small living room talking at the top of their lungs?

A. "Jolly."

Q. How do you write up a hostess whose supply of liquor runs halfway through a party and whose sandwiches have ragged edges?

A. "Charmingly informal" or "refreshingly Bohemian."

Q. Do members of society enjoy the social whirl?

A. They are usually "too whipped" or "simply exhausted." Besides, they don't like cocktail parties.

Q. So they stay away from them?

A. By no means.

Q. What is the chief problem in the lives of Capital hostesses?

A. Finding an extra man.

Q. Who are the most sought after among the bachelors?

A. Members of the diplomatic corps.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Why Do Women Fall in Love With Their Doctors? Is It Common Occurrence? How Deal With It?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Is it a common thing for women patients to fall in love with their doctors? Is there any deep significance to the fact that some do? And why does it happen? Also, is it possible for a doctor to be attracted to a patient in like manner? I would say that dealing with many women would make him immune. Am I right? What is the best way for said patient to overcome such a thing? She is very worried and would appreciate a logical answer from you. Could it be that weakness leans on strength? Or is there some other psychological explanation? Sincerely,

MARY M.

DEAR MARY M.: Every capable physician with a successful practice is casually accustomed to the veneration of the majority of his patients of both sexes, of every age. Because he has, at one time or another, relieved their mental or physical suffering or (in their opinion, at least) rescued them single-handed from the very jaws of death, they more or less unconsciously impute to the doctor well-nigh supernatural qualities of wisdom and powers of healing, and spontaneously accord him a naively worshipful brand of grateful, dependent affection.

I am speaking, of course, of the first-class physician, who recognizes and seeks to discharge his professional responsibility of communicating psychic health to the individual, simultaneously with effecting organic diagnosis and prescribing pharmaceutical remedies. Such men of medical science are taught, as part of their training, to bring to each patient the psychological attitude best suited to his needs while under treatment. Moreover, the doctor who would do the best job of healing must achieve a sort of confessional relationship with his client, the better to understand what psychic or socio-economic factors have brought about his illness, or are retarding his recovery.

Since the very nature of his healing work makes it necessary (according to the modern viewpoint of medicine) for the doctor to assume the scientific responsibility of exploring the patient's personality and personal history; and since the success of this soul-searching endeavor depends upon the doctor's winning the patient's full confidence concerning the range and receptivity of his sympathetic understanding (of all the moral, social and physical distresses which beset the individual) —it naturally follows that the better the doctor, the more solicitously attentive will he be (or seem to be) to the client's serial narrative and distressing symptoms.

In groping, manually and imaginatively, for the causative factors underlying organic or psychically induced illness, the doctor finds himself in a delicate relationship with his client; in a relationship, indeed, which the latter—if she happens to be a neurotic, socially maladjusted or badly spoiled person—may witlessly misconstrue, to her own disadvantage, as an intensely personal situation, with mutually significant emotional implications.

There are several reasons why women sometimes fancy themselves in love with their physicians. Yet all of them have to do, I think, with emotional immaturity, social maladjustment or love starvation. There is, for instance, the emotionally immature woman's tendency to confuse her doctor, because of his healing powers or services, with her childishly nebulous image of God. There is the socially maladjusted woman's tendency to believe that here, at last, she has found one person who really understands, accepts and appreciates her for what she is; who reads into her doctor's scientifically motivated and impersonally conceded ministrations a personal coloration which has no existence outside her own mind.

Then there is the love-starved, romance-hungry woman's imaginative surrender (her tenderly passionate secret dedication) to the image of her doctor (affluent, beautifully groomed, all-powerful in his domain) as a man who seems—in contrast to her workaday associates or domestic intimates—to constitute the perfection of manly virtue, in his attributes of wisdom, dignity, courtesy, capability, magnetism, scholarliness, etc. Because the doctor gives her the benefit of his psychologically restorative powers while she is under treatment, so that she feels altogether happy and self-assured in his company, she unconsciously assumes that he is, for her, the source of all happiness.

There is little likelihood of the capable physician's falling in love with his average woman patient. In the first place, by virtue of his whole training, he is, both consciously and unconsciously, on guard against such a denouement. In the second place, no matter how intense his concentration upon a given patient at the time of treating her, the solicitude which he brings to her (however sincere) is switched off like a light the moment he turns his attention to the patient next in line.

Whereas the emotionally susceptible woman patient may return home to brood over the image of her doctor, as the quintessence of manly or godly perfection, the doctor himself—in scrupulous devotion to the exigencies of his profession—has dismissed her from mind the moment she is out of sight. And when his day's work is finished, he sheds all memories and reminders of its responsibilities as a snake sheds its skin, plunging enthusiastically into avocational pursuits, or social recreations or domestic activities—in order to refresh himself completely for the next day's work.

The way to overcome a bootless infatuation for one's physician is to recognize (1) its futility; (2) its mutual nuisance value; (3) the fact that the very attitude implies sickness which needs healing; (4) the fact that the attitude, if seriously entertained and imaginatively fed, minimizes the patient's chances of complete recovery, since it forces the physician—in very self-protection—to employ forbiddingly formal precautions in undertaking diagnosis and treatment; and (5) the fact that the ethical physician both deplores and secretly abhors the woman who parades her foolish infatuation before his eyes or the eyes of his office staff. M. H.

It's Time to Tee Off Now

Even if your husband is no conqueror of the fairway, he will feel more like one if he's dressed the part. Here are champion's suggestions, for a smart, practical golf wardrobe. At left, is a mix match costume for immediate wear. The porous open necked shirt and slacks are in harmonizing tones of tan beige for the shirt, a darker tan for the slacks which are supported by a Roman striped belt. The elk shoes below have removable spikes which can be replenished when worn out. Sammy Snead, golf stylist, is caught at right in the popular Palm Beach slacks, topped by a classic cashmere sweater for vacation time in colder Northern resorts.

WHEN Slammin' Sammy Snead, Walter Hagen, Gene Sarazen and the rest of the kingpins of golfdom got together last week at the famous Round Robin golf tournament at Fresh Meadow, nothing but Palm Beach slacks were worn. Not only did Harry Cooper, the winner of $1,000 and the Goodall trophy, swing prize winning clubs about garbed in Palm Beach cloth, but his 14 famous pro golfer rivals wore the same.

MARSHALL ADAMS

Golf is Washington's favorite sport, statisticians claim. And since your own husband and all other sports-minded men like to know that they wear what champions wear, we have gathered seasonable style tips from golf experts.

Color on Golf Course

Stylists agree that the Palm Beach slack is here to stay on the fairway. They are worn in cool white or natural by the golfer who wants to make his appearance a spectacular one. The conservative or the big man who wants to look slimmer wears a Palm Beach suit or slacks in non-soiling tans or browns. Open necked sport shirts or meshy weave, or of rayon-cotton mixtures are best with these.

Next we find that color has swept onto the golf course. Instead of the dead white golf season, this summer finds fresh clean blues, beigy tans and steel greys stealing the show among mix-match enthusiasts. The mix and match idea for short or long sleeved sport shirts and slacks is a sound one, good for all types and kinds on all budgets. The prospect of being able to now buy, say, a grey green tie-less sport shirt with slacks in a darker shade of green, but in the same color key is a wholesome one, and is taking on like mad among the stronger sex. These air cooled mix-match golf outfits also answer the problem of wives who must stretch one essential sports suit to care for not alone golf, but picnics, hikes, country weekends and so on.

The fabrics for these mix matches are crash, gabardine, cotton, string and combines of cool synthetic yarns. Incidentally, there is even a snooty waterproofed pure silk golf suit which is odorless and heat and acid resistant for wear over summery golf togs.

Vacation Golfers, Heed!

For the golf fiend who decides that even vacations in the mountains, in the chill of Maine or in the dampness of lake resorts is drab minus "The Game," there are bright golf sweaters and jackets for warmth. Golfers themselves propose a new, collarless cardigan jacket of wool or homespun in a rich neutral coloring. For sweater collectors, the V-necked lightweight classic in cashmere or cotton yarn goes on and on. The colors are better than ever; crisp greens, horizon blues, tans, bright yellows and all the high pastels in the same tones as the mix match washable suits.

Best golf news of all comes in the form of the shoes. The elk moccasin in chocolate brown is the No. 1 shoe of the year. It is made Indian fashion, with stitched trimming and oiled for complete waterproofing. The biggest innovation the golf shoe has had in the past two years is the removable spike, which the moccasin now features.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Out at the Fair the Polish Ballet has been delighting lovers of that form of entertainment. Pretty tow-headed ballerinas, and elegant dancing. But their visit has had sad repercussions in our newspaper print shops. I hear that over 20 linotype operators have been overcome by the heat or something while setting up the names of the principals, such as Miss Wojcikowska and Mr. Miszczyk. Reads like the Fordham football team.

I hear Aunt Ethel Barrymore was in a pew when her brother John reopened in "My Dear Children" in Chicago. Bet she kept her fingers crossed for Johnnie. What troupers, those folks. Never a dull moment.

THE YOUNGER generation is bursting upon the local scene. A few days before Grover Whelan, the fair boss, was made a doctor of laws by New York University, he became a grandpa at 53, when his daughter Mary, now Mrs. Robert Saul, presented the family with a daughter. Localites giggled a bit when the new granddaddy didn't say a word about it, the news arriving from other and usually quieter sources. Then our boss cop, Police Commissioner Lew Valentine, saw his attractive daughter Miram get her diploma from the suburban College of New Rochelle. Oh, these kiddies will insist on aging their pappies!

Checking on my favorite thrill of the summer, I find that the big parachute drop at the fair is 250 feet high, or the height of a 25-story building. My gosh, and we come down at 25 feet a second. Seemed faster to me. James H. Strong, who built the tower, tells me over 30,000 folks made the leap in the first month. It's really a treat—unless you lose a shoe on the way down . . .

COATS? Sure—and the shorter ones, sometimes called sugar types, are gaining in popularity here just now. They are moving fast in bright plaids, checks, corduroys and angoras. Other much-liked numbers are sharkskins, and also little coats of bright red flannel.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

Short, Stocky Woman Should Work Especially to Slim Her Waistline

NATURE MUST LIKE the short, stocky women because she makes so many of them. For all the talk about women being "divinely tall," most of us are less than 5 feet 4.

Every type figure has its problem measurement but with the short, plump girls this is most apt to be the waistline. The bust and hips are rather nice, but the whole effect is destroyed because the waistline fails to taper gracefully.

Slimming down a waist that is not only thick but solid—as is often the case with the short figure—is not easy. But if you are tired of having a 30-inch waist when it should, by all accounts, by only 26 inches, let's get it down. At first you will feel stiff and awkward and you will not be able to twist and bend agilely. But each day will find you a bit more supple and each week should find you a trifle slimmer.

Try Sideward Bend

First, try the sideward bend of the trunk to dislodge waistline excess:

POSITION: Standing on the knees with hands on the hips and the hips tucked under.

MOVEMENT: Keep the body in alignment (don't let the chin poke forward or the hips stick out) as you slowly bend to the side—bend until it hurts! Return to position, stretch upward and bend to the opposite side.

Now add a twist to the sideward bend:

POSITION: Standing on the floor on the knees, arms straight out at the sides, shoulder-level.

Use Stretching Bar

All figures have a tendency to settle but since the ribs and hips are closer together in the short figure, the settling of this figure must be vigorously combated. Stretching on a bar pulls the midsection slim and is perfect exercise for the stocky girl. You should have the stretching bar high enough so that you can just manage a good grip in it when standing on the toes. Then you can stretch by trying to work the heels down so that the feet are flat on the floor. Be on guard against hunching the shoulders up or stretching with the arms. The pull should be muscularly and strongest between the ribs and the hips. Another good stretching-bar stunt is to keep the toes on the floor and use them as a pivot while twisting the hips from side to side.

4-H Visitors See Beltsville Experiments

Cream of America's Youth Interested in Livestock Research

The cream of America's 4-H Club boys and girls, in annual encampment beside the Tidal Basin, went to the Beltsville Research Center yesterday afternoon to see superbred live-stock and experiments expected to create a streamlined turkey.

The campers—all selected because of their achievements in 4-H enterprises—earlier in the day went atop the Washington Monument. It required an hour and a half to transport the 172 of them to the top.

Camp officials found the boys particularly interested in seeing the livestock and learning more of the horse-breeding at Beltsville.

They were given dinner on the grounds at Beltsville last night, and were scheduled to return to camp at 10 p. m., the bed-time hour. The campers arise at 6:30 a. m. and are required to have their camp shipshape within an hour.

At 10:30 a. m. today, they will be addressed by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, in the South Agriculture Building Auditorium. At 11:30 a. m. the schedule calls for visit to the White House. In the afternoon they will go to a ball game as the guests of Clark Griffith. In the evening, they will go to the Library of Congress.

They were addressed on the subject of "Washington Personalities" yesterday morning by Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., in the Agriculture Auditorium. In a later address by Dr. Alfred Bilmanis, Latvian Minister, the various youth movements in Europe were described. The minister touched upon the 4-H movement in his own country, which is patterned after the original in this country.

The boys and girls encamped here, all strangers to one another, spent most of yesterday between the program high-points, in getting acquainted. They will remain in camp until next Wednesday night.

Griffs Lose Two More; Fans Give Their Opinions

White Sox Defeat Nats, 5-1 and 4-2; Case Scores All 3 Tallies for Locals

By Shirley Povich.

The Nats succeeded yesterday in escaping the ignominy of a no-hit defeat, but with that their success ended. Five thousand Griffith Stadium fans saw the Chicago White Sox fetch the anemic-hitting Washington club a pair of beatings by the modest but decisive scores of 5 to 1 and 4 to 2.

The White Sox threw a right-hander (Jack Knott) to the Nats' chin in the opening game and then doubled them up with a potent lefthander (Thornton Lee) in the second game. In 18 innings of baseball, the Nats produced only seven hits.

That second game was won by the White Sox with the co-operation of Washington's Buddy Lewis, who came up empty-handed after bending for a ground ball with the score tied at 2-2 in the eighth inning. But that first game was an unadulterated pitching triumph for Jack Knott.

Knott, a refugee from the St. Louis Browns, for whom he pitched in vain for four years, accomplished something of a masterpiece in the opener when he held the Nats to two scratch hits and failed to achieve a no-hitter only because a bunt rolled safe and a slow infield roller took a tricky hop.

Between Knott and his bid for no-hit fame was interposed George Case's first-inning bunt, and Rookie Bob Prichard's cheap hit to the

Harsh Words, Cutting Remarks Consensus Of Fans Who Watch 'Baseball' Games

The customers who go out to see Washington's Nationals play at baseball do not think so highly of the home team today—in fact, a number of them said yesterday they would rather not even think of the Nats.

Harsh words and all manner of cutting remarks bandied about Griffith Stadium yesterday disclosed this startling situation, viz., that the Nationals are so much spinach in their home town.

By secret methods known to only a few hundred poll conductors, six typical baseball fans were cornered and grilled mercilessly along these intelligent lines:

"How do you like the Nationals and what did you come out here for anyhow?

"I don't" and "I don't know" ran most of the answers, which were nothing short of amazing, to say the least, and at times shocking, to say the most.

"I think they are rotten," complained Mrs. E. W. Shanklin, of 114 South Clifton Terrace northwest, who says she has four sons who think the same thing.

"Washington has had such good teams that I don't see how Mr. Griffith can keep trying to put over this bush league team on us. Why this is the Nation's Capital and everything here ought to be the best. I was so disgusted with that road trip that I sat down and wrote leters to the sports editors. But I haven't sent them yet."

Mrs. Shanklin confessed sadly that she used to attend the Nats' home games every day—"even on those

Gomez, Yanks Beat Harder, Tribe, 1-0

Three Double Plays Aid N. Y. Southpaw; Each Pitcher Gives 4 Hits; Series Even

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 15.—A drab run in the fourth inning became a gilt-edged security in the ninth today when it decided a spectacular pitching duel between Lefty Gomez and Mel Harder in favor of the Yankees, 1 to 0, over the Cleveland Indians.

Each pitcher gave four hits, but the champions supported Gomez with three double plays to make his route easy.

Harder gave four passes, and one of these got him in trouble in the fourth when it put Tom Henrich on base to start the inning. Joe DiMaggio promptly singled to left, sending Henrich to third and enabling him to score as Bill Dickey grounded out on the next play.

The only extra-base blow of the ball game was a double by Senor Gomez himself, but this did not figure in the scoring. Harder finally was removed for a pinch hitter in the eighth inning, and Harry Eisenstat, obtained yesterday from Detroit, finished without a scratch.

The victory, Gomez's fifth against two defeats, evened the series at a game apiece. The veteran southpaw was in trouble only once—the first half of the fourth when Bruce Campbell and Ben Chapman opened with successive singles, but he tightened to retire the side in order.

Izaak Walton's Prized Books, 275 Years Old, Reveal Rare Bits of Knowledge for Fishermen

"The Compleat Angler," of Five Original Editions Valued At $5,000 by Congressional Library

By Al Hailey

The pike is a melancholy fish and is given to moments of solitary brooding—although it is sometimes likely to bite a chunk out of your foot if it happens to dangle in the water.

This choice little intimacy on the temperament of the pike was picked up yesterday thumbing through one of the five original editions of Izaak Walton's "The Compleat Angler"—a $5,000 treasure carefully guarded in the rare book section of the Congressional Library.

Published 275 years ago in the lifetime of the immortal fisherman, the five editions of Walton's discourses on the art of fishing have lain in the Library's rare book shelves since 1874.

Each Valued at $1,000

Bringing the pocket-size volumes to public view yesterday the first time, Curator V. Valta Parma casually mentioned each edition can be valued at something over $1,000.

Hufty Wins With Overton And Peacock

Most of Youthful Contingent Defeated At Chevy Chase; Greiner Loses Again

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

With only Buddy Sharkey to uphold the prestige of the youth element, that looked to monopolize the thirty-fifth annual Middle Atlantic championship at Chevy Chase, the tournament moved into the semifinal round yesterday with two admitted veterans, Spencer Overton, of Baltimore, and Page Hufty, of the host club, joining Roger Peacock, the comeback favorite, in today's round of four.

Billy Shea, co-medalist with Sharkey, Ralph Bogart, Army and Navy's promising youngster, and Earle Skinker, Columbia's schoolboy finalist, found the path rough in the morning matches and dropped into the consolation bracket. Shea was no match for methodical Overton, Bogart met a tartar in A. B. Adams, jr., of the host club, losing 6 and 4, while Skinker couldn't hold an early lead and lost to Ed Stinebert, of Rodgers Forge, 3 and 2.

The other members of the teen-age group, Bobby Brownell, '38 finalist and defending titleholder, Otto Greiner, lost out in the qualifying round Wednesday and were only half-way successful in second flight matches. Brownell won twice, coming from behind to beat Russ Hollebaugh in the afternoon, but Greiner lost to Charles Kent, of Farmington, 2 up in a totally unexpected exit from the tournament.

Sharkey, despite his youth, looks to be the man to beat on yesterday's performances as he didn't lose a hole in two matches with a pair of Baltimoreans, Erford Barles of Rolling Road and Ed Stinebert, Rodgers Forge.

He defeated both by 5 and 4 margins, with a near-par brand of

Helen Dettweiler Wins In Western Open Play

By the United Press.

St. Louis, June 15.—Helen Dettweiler, professional of Washington, D. C., late today led the way into the semifinals of the Women's Western Open golf championship play here by defeating Shirley Ann Johnson, pretty 22-year-old Chicago amateur, 6 and 5.

Playing under a blazing sun with the temperature ranging in the 90's, Miss Dettweiler shot the most sensational golf of the tourney thus far. She was four up on Miss Johnson at the finish of the first nine holes after shooting one under par 36.

Miss Dettweiler won the tenth with a five, the twelfth with a birdie and took the match when they halved the thirteenth in par fives.

Mrs. Sam Israel, of New Orleans, La., advanced to the semifinals by defeating Ellamae Williams, of Chicago, 3 and 2. She came from behind in the first nine to win the eighth and ninth to make it all square at the turn. Mrs. Israel then won the tenth, eleventh and the fourteenth holes to go three up and took the match when the next two holes were halved.

Jeanne Cline, 15-year-old Bloomington, Ill., schoolgirl whose play has been one of the outstanding features of the meet, also moved into the semifinals by turning back Dorothy Foster, 22-year-old Springfield, Ill., music teacher, one up.

The sturdy little schoolgirl shot a 41 for the first nine and held a two up lead going into the back stretch. She lost the fourteenth hole to Miss Foster, but took the match when the remaining four holes were halved.

Defending Champion Beatrice Barrett, of Minneapolis, remained in the running by downing Phyllis Buchanan, of Denver, 1-up, after a close battle that went 20 holes.

Georgia Coleman, Olympic Diving Star, in Hospital

New York, June 15 (AP).—Georgia Coleman, of Los Angeles, Olympic diving star, was described by physicians as in a "very serious condition" at Polyclinic Hospital today. She recently recovered from an infantile paralysis attack.

Miss Coleman

Taken to the hospital yesterday, doctors said she was "under observation" to determine whether it would be advisable to operate. She is suffering from complications of the liver.

It would be scant appreciation of the interest and enterprise of Mr. S. H. Dunn, of 3216 Cleveland avenue northwest, if we did not gazette the letter he has dispatched to this department. It is a startling compendium of the day-by-day distress of the Washington club and, it follows, Washington fans.

POVICH

Explains Mr. Dunn: "After listening to the broadcasts and reading the newspaper accounts of the Washington club's games, I became so disgusted that I went to The Post Building this morning and searched the files there to learn just how many games we have lost this year because of errors.

"The results were amazing, to say the least. Out of 31 games lost, 14 of them have been due directly to errors. If I may, I would like to list for you just what happened in these 14 tossed-away games:

"April 25 at Boston—Three errors in the seventh inning to give the Red Sox a 4-2 lead in a game which they eventually won, 6-5.

"May 5 at Chicago—Weiaj dropped fly for two-base error to give Chicago game, 2-1.

"May 7 at Cleveland—Wild pitch and hit batter by Appleton to put winning runs in scoring position. Three errors in game.

"May 14 at Detroit—Errors by Case and Myer gave Tigers game.

British Writers Want No Alibis

By the Associated Press.

London, June 15.—British sports writers have a couple of suggestions about how Americans should conduct themselves Saturday in the Sydney Wooderson vs. United States mile race at Princeton.

First is that it wouldn't be quite sporting for the Americans to gang up on little Sydney and second is that it's not polite to alibi for Glenn Cunningham before Wooderson beats him.

As to the first the London Times remarks:

"One hopes the Americans will resist any temptation to run as a team. If something out of the ordinary is to be accomplished there will be little room for mere victory tactics."

As to Cunningham's alibi, British writers are disturbed about the announcement that Glenn hasn't been able to get in very much training for "mile of the century."

"Far be it from this department," says John Macadem, of the Daily Express, "to do other than pour pails full of cement into every nook and cranny in the fabric of international amity, but somebody must up and say something about the alibi barrage being put up by the Americans."

The British believe Wooderson not only is sure to win if he is fairly treated, but that he is likely to break his world mark of 4:06.4.

Princeton, N. J., June 15 (AP).—Sydney Wooderson, bantam British barrister bent on beating Glenn Cunningham in the Princeton Invitation Mile run Saturday, concluded preparations for the race today with a 61second 440-yard run.

The little Englishman from Kent County has not run a mile on the Palmer Stadium track since he came here early in the week. As has been his custom, he jogged two laps around the track following his test run and left the track to Blaine Rideout, of North Texas Teachers, and Chuck Fenske, Wisconsin miler, two of Wooderson's competitors Saturday.

Terry's Team Scores Five In Seventh

Moore's Homer Starts Attack on French; Brown, in Relief, Wins Third Game

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 15.—The New York Giants routed Lefty Larry French with a five run flurry in the seventh inning today to beat the Chicago Cubs 7 to 4 and increase their string of consecutive victories to seven.

After six innings of sniping a run here and another there had put the Cubs in front 3 to 2, Joe Moore led off the seventh with a homer and his fellow Giants added four more runs on a walk, two wild pitches and four hits—the last a two-run double by Alex Kampouris.

Fat Walter Brown, who relieved Manny Salvo at the start of the sixth, was credited with the victory, his third against no defeats. He permitted one run, a homer by Hank Leiber in the seventh.

Bees Defeat Pirates, 6-5, in 11th Inning

Pittsburgh, June 15.—Debs Garms' fourth hit of the day, a ringing double with two out in the eleventh inning, followed by 37-year-old Johnny Cooney's single gave Boston a 6-to-5 decision today over the tailspinning Pittsburgh Pirates.

It was the sixth consecutive setback for the Bucs and left them a lone game ahead of the seventh-place Bees.

Chuck Klein kept Pittsburgh in the running for a time with three hits that drove in as many runs. His homer in the seventh put the Pirates a run ahead but doubles by Henry Majeski and Al Lopez in the eighth tied the score again.

Kreevich Beats Throw to Second—Is Safe!

Ladies' Days." She has been to only a few games this season and can't see much reason to carry on.

"I can't see much hope for these boys," brooded Edwin O. Linger, of 1710 Goodhope road southeast, an old Nat observer of 32 years' standing.

"Why I've been coming here so long I can't break the habit," he went on. "I've been hoping to see these boys developing but they are still making the same old mistakes."

Interrupted in the middle of a hoarse "t'row dat bum outta th' park," Natie Brown, Washington's one-time contribution to the heavyweight fight game, confided he still goes to the games because he likes to stand in front of the concession stands and smell the hot dogs and mustard.

"These fellas are so much garbage," he pronounced. "If they got nine new men they would have a ball club."

A note of cheer was interjected into these disheartening observations, however, by Miss Lucy Waters, a Georgetown Visitation Convent student.

"I have not given up on the Nationals," said she. "I even believe they will finish in the first division if they are successful in their home stand, and I think they will be."

A few moments later the Nationals lost their second game of the day to Chicago's White Sox.

A Nat observer from Baltimore, Donald Baer, insisted there is an unpleasant aroma around the ball playing of the local boys and predicted they would finish eighth if they were in the International League.

Col. Jimmy Lake, the Carnation Kid, however, was optimistic. He echoed the sentiment of Owner Clark Griffith, who says he knows his team is strictly Grade B just now.

Lake pointed out that the Nats are just youngsters and that the customers should be more patient. He confessed a liking for booing umpires, however, and when last seen was doing same lustily. This appeared very strange, for down on the field a Nat was making what has artistically been described as a "lousy play."

second baseman in the fifth inning. You may search for another Washington hit in the first game until rigor mortis sets in, but you won't find any. There weren't any more.

When George Case wasn't crossing the plate for the Nats yesterday, Washington wasn't scoring any runs. Their lone run of the first game and their two runs of the second game were scored by Case, and on each occasion he was driven across the plate by Buddy Lewis on a long sacrifice fly.

Rookie Joe Haynes was outpitched by Knott in the first game, but it was a cruel defeat that Left-Handed Ken Chase encountered against Lee in the second game. Chase held the White Sox to eight hits, but their two winning runs were tainted affairs.

After the over-ambitious Gerald Walker was trapped between third and home following his triple in the opening inning of the second game, and run down, the Nats took a 1-to-0 lead. The procedure was simple. George Case simply tripled to leftfield with the aid of a spread-eagle slide into the base, and Buddy Lewis simply brought him home with a fly to Walker.

Rensa's single to left paved the way for a White Sox run off Chase in the third inning, and Bejma scored him with a looping single to right, whereupon the Nats surged into a 3-to-1 lead in the same inning. Case doubled to center, went to third on Estalella's long fly, and waited for Lewis to produce another sacrifice fly to left.

Lewis encouraged the White Sox to tie the score at 2-2 in the fourth, when, after Kreevich drew a walk, he made a two-base muff of McNair's grounder.

With Lee handcuffing the Nats in the last six innings by pitching two-hit ball over that period, Lewis put Chase in trouble again in the eighth when he picked up Bejma's slow roller, made an errant heave to Prichard at first and put Bejma on second with none out. Bejma moved to third when Kuhel beat out a bunt on which Chase and Lewis pulled an Alphonse-Gaston act, and Walker scored him with a grounder to Lewis.

The Sox came up with another run in the ninth after Kreevich singled, moved to second on an infield out, stole third and scored on Rensa's squeeze bunt. But it was an entirely superfluous tally.

The Nats' success against Knott in the first game started and ended with the first inning when Case single-handedly produced Washington's only run. He beat out a hit down the third base line, stole second, stole third and scored on one of Lewis' fly balls.

"May 14 vs. Boston—Travis' error in seventh gave Red Sox tying run which resulted in 12-inning victory for Boston.

"May 21 vs. Chicago—Error by Case in tenth inning brought about defeat.

"May 28 at Boston—Three errors paved way for six runs when Washington held 4-0 lead.

"May 29 vs. Philadelphia—Two errors by Waedell in ninth inning gave Athletics deciding run.

"June 2 at Chicago—Lewis muffed double-play ball in fifth inning to tie the game with Washington leading, 5-2.

"June 3 at Chicago—Guiliani dropped ball when Walker tried to steal home with deciding run.

"June 11 at Detroit—Errors by Lewis, and Wright's fielding lose game."

(Editor's note—June 15 at Washington—Errors by Lewis feiched the Nats a beating in second game of double-header.)

'S WUN'NERFUL-DEPARTMENT: Mr. Tommy Connolly, the dignified little Irishman who is now boss of the American League umpires, reports that he was profoundly impressed with the Baseball Centennial celebration at Cooperstown, N. Y. "It was wonderful," said Mr. Connolly.

"Sure, and I was proud, too, of those old-timers like Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker and Babe Ruth and Nap Lajoie, and the rest of 'em. The way those fellows have improved their vocabularies was something to hear. They walked right up to those radio microphones and started unloading words like 'magnificent,' 'superb,' 'imposing' and 'stupendous.'

"They sounded wonderful, except they didn't sound like the same fellows I used to know when they were playing baseball and I was umpiring."

SUPREME-INSULT DEPARTMENT: The Charlotte (N. C.) News, mildly quarreling with the Charlotte Baseball Club which sent its regular firstbaseman, Bob Prichard, to the Nats, at a time when Charlotte needed bolstering, reported that transfer as follows: "Bob Prichard yesterday was sold down the river to the Washington club."

'Tis true the Nats at the time were in the throes of a five-game losing streak and had lost 9 out of 13 games on a Western trip, but it was the first time the Washington American League club had ever been designated as "down the river" from the standpoint of Piedmont League ball.

NO-TEAM-NEEDED DEPARTMENT: Joe Cambria, the lone ranger of the Nats, yesterday ushered his newest find into Griffith Stadium for a try-out. In Clark Griffith's office, Cambria was extolling the semi-pros feats of William Hollidayoke, 19-year-old Annapolis lad.

"I have something here, Griff," said Cambria. "This boy is sure-fire to be a big league pitcher. I picked him up after I was tipped off by a friend that he had won six games this season, four of 'em no-hitters.

"Imagine that—four no-hitters. And he had no kind of a team behind him."

Whereupon, Walter Johnson, who used to be a pitcher himself, sagely observed: "If he can pitch like that, he doesn't need a team behind him."

A Statement by the Secretary of Agriculture of Cuba

To Announce A BRAND-NEW CIGAR

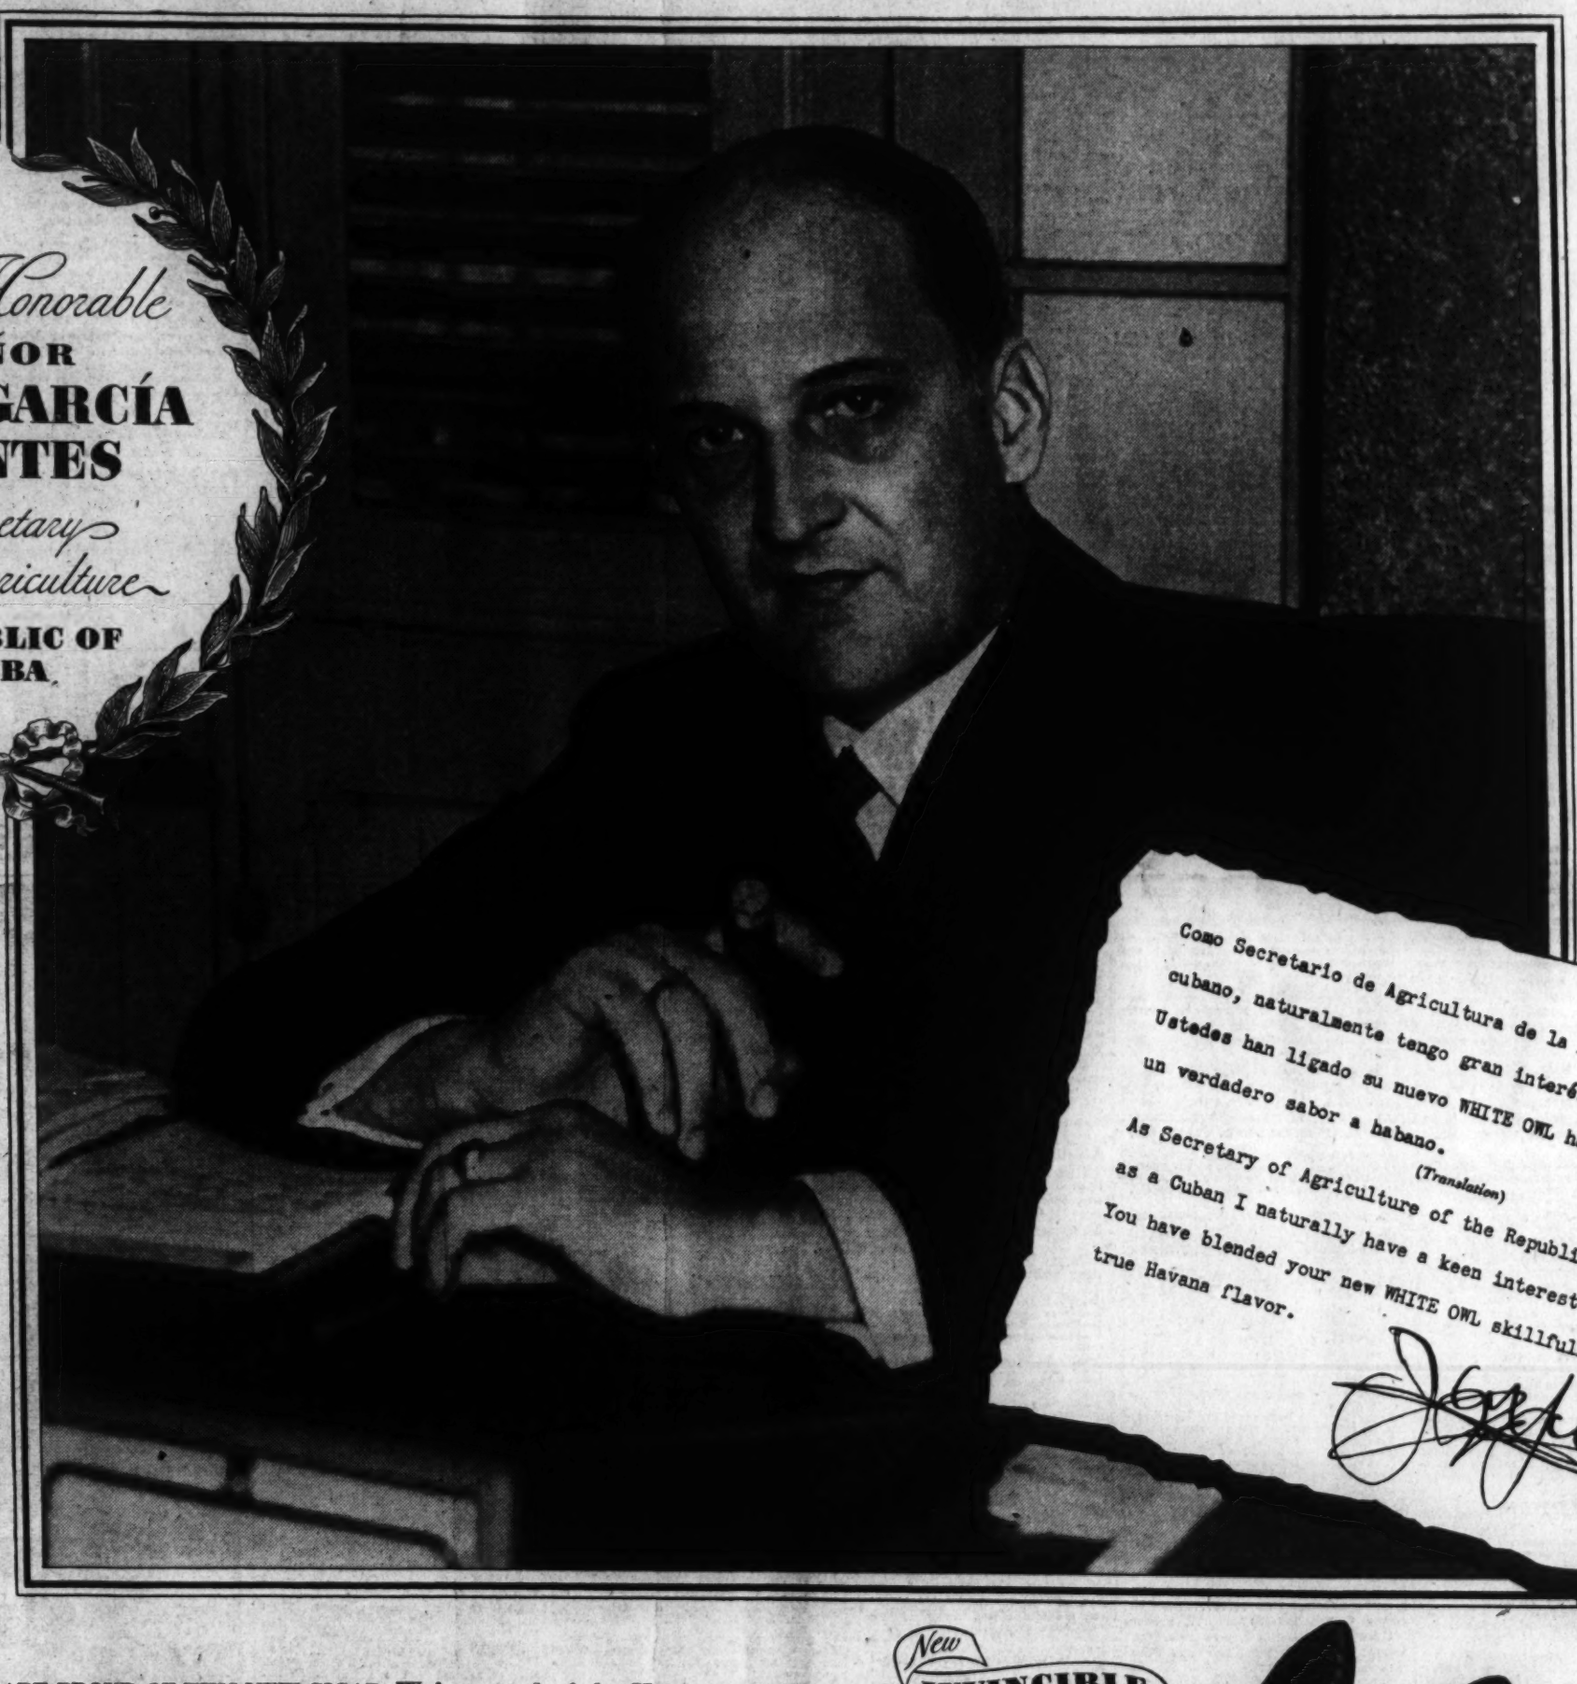
SEÑOR JOSÉ GARCÍA MONTES
Secretary of Agriculture
REPUBLIC OF CUBA



Como Secretario de Agricultura de la República de Cuba y como cubano, naturalmente tengo gran interés en el tabaco cubano. Ustedes han ligado su nuevo WHITE OWL hábilmente para captar un verdadero sabor a habano.

(Translation)

As Secretary of Agriculture of the Republic of Cuba and as a Cuban I naturally have a keen interest in Cuban tobacco. You have blended your new WHITE OWL skillfully to catch a true Havana flavor.

Certainly the most expert appraisers of the taste of Havana tobacco are to be found in Havana itself. So we took the new Blended-with-Havana White Owl down there to test it. We selected prominent Cubans—such as Señor José García Montes, Cuban Secretary of Agriculture—gave them some of the new White Owls to smoke. Without exception, they all praised the Havana flavor of this new cigar.

WE ARE PROUD OF THIS NEW CIGAR. We're proud of the Havana tobacco we use in it . . . it's a really good grade. Does that sound unbelievable for a 5¢ cigar? Well, we are America's largest buyers of Havana tobacco and we know what we are talking about. Fact is, it's the same type of Havana tobacco that is used in popular cigars costing 10¢ and more. And there's a generous helping of this tobacco in each new White Owl, too.

We could go on and on telling you about the new White Owl, but the only way for you to find out how good it really tastes is to smoke one. If you enjoy a good cigar, try one of the new White Owls today. Your taste will tell you why it wins the honors—even in Havana.

New INVINCIBLE

YOUR CHOICE OF 2 SHAPES

Another "10¢" feature—now yours for 5¢... a choice of shapes to suit your smoking taste. A long, trim, new Invincible. And a rich, full-bodied, new Club House shape. You get the same amount of tobacco—the same mild blend in either size—only the shape varies.

Fernbrake, With Palumbo Up, Wins Charles Town Feature

Happy Road Finishes One Length Back

Nob Runs in Third Position; Shanks, D. C. Jockey, Scores On Adriatic in 5th

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 15.—E. A. Nicodemus' Fernbrake, winner of a maiden race by ten lengths in her previous start, came back today to score in feature company, winning the Dr. J. L. Luke Purse while under Jockey Sammy Palumbo's handling. The roan daughter of Mowlee lasted to win by a length from Mrs. W. Ashbridge's Happy Road, with M. R. Waugh's Nob in third position.

Fernbrake was installed the favorite and paid $5.80 while stepping the 6-furlong course in 1:15 3-5. The track was fast.

Palumbo had Fernbrake away well and sent her to the top going into the first turn. he drew out gradually and appeared headed for another of those ten-length victories. However, after opening a gap, the filly had to be put to a strong drive.

In the stretch Happy Road moved up and Jockey Lou Machado attempted to go to the inside of the leader. Fernbrake swung over and Machado was forced to take up. Nob, third at the start, held that position throughout. None of the others was in a serious position.

Sail By, under a good ride by Jockey Buddy Root, won the first race. Main Spin, a long shot, with Palumbo up, set all the pace but could not resist the winner. Happy Miracle came from far back to be third. The winner paid $6.20.

MARGIE WRACK, close up from start, took command in stretch and held on gamely under strong drive. HAPPY HOST raced on own courage. HIBLAZE stopped.

Bill Bennings

At The Post

Charlestown, W. Va., June 15.

Dear Al:

How about that dark ace I told you was shipped from here to Delaware Park for a killing? Jockey Vesseli was forced to cancel his mounts after Duchess Del threw up her head and almost knocked his teeth out. There will be another ball game next Tuesday for the Bennings press box pests. They have been challenged by the Jockeys. With the exception of the pitcher, the Jockeys have named the following line-up: R. Root, manager, and short stop; Palumbo, right field; C. Coffman, first base; B. Hacker, third base; W. Nertney, second base; J. Hernandez, left field; R. Klein, center field; E. O. Johnson, catcher; Johnny Shanks, coach; L. Machado, W. Kirk, L. Garrett, G. Witmen, J. A. Taylor, D. Scocca and A. Treptor, substitutes. Lou Machado and Woodrow Kirk jumped into the battle for the Jockeys leadership when they registered their nineteenth victory yesterday. Sammy Palumbo leads. Prince Turly went lame in yesterday's race and has been placed on the steward's list. Trainer William Whitney scratched Shanteb from today's card and departed for Baltimore, where his mother is ill. Rockmin Pandoramint and Schley Goree are the latest additions to Starter Morrissey's schooling list. Ed Gaines moved into third place in the trainers' race when he saddled his seventh winner yesterday. R. F. Cook is tops with 10 winners. Several horsemen just back from New York state that Raymond (Sonny) Workman, of Washington, is riding in grand style. Workman yesterday won the Astoria Stakes at Aqueduct with Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Now What. BILL.

First race—Miss Maker goes again and it looks like another set of brackets for the juvenile star despite the assignment of 122 pounds. Paper Girl downed Miss Maker when latter ran wide in her first start but I look for a reverse of the order. Miss Pilgrim showed speed while racing in luckless fashion last out.

Second race—Landsman, seems better suited here than in recent races. Not especially suited by this route but I'm going to string along. Tedy West should improve off that last. Freds Warning to take care of the others.

Third race—Night Watch, second on the reserve list, would take these into camp if placed in action. Good Gracious has plenty of speed and looks as the one to beat. The Palumbo influence might help Lilteen.

Fourth race—Sky Lassie deserves another chance. Gets in light and needs only a share of the racing luck. Trostar, despite 116 pounds, should be a prominent factor. Chessie gets in with a feather.

Fifth race — Jabberie downed better than these when in shape. Showed a return to form in the last and may be ready to score. Stealing Home won last week and is dangerous. Nay Nay is on the reserve list but will be right there if in action.

Sixth race—Lady Buck goes at a route she prefers and will be the winner if Bernhardt gives us a good saddle job. Timetia, among the "also eligibles," would be a keen factor. Morvim will be a keen factor and would move

7-Up Defeats O'Donnell's; Leads League

McIntire's Relief Pitching, Coakley's Bat Win 7-6 Game

Lefty McIntire's fine relief pitching and a 5-run rally in the last three innings yesterday gave 7-Up a 7-6 victory over O'Donnell's Sea Grill and undisputed first place in the Industrial League. McIntire pitched scoreless ball for the last three innings.

George Coakley, with five hits in as many trips, led the late attack which saw the winners push over 4 runs in the seventh to tie the score and the decisive marker in the ninth. Coakley's single behind Schwab's single accounted for 7-Up's margin.

Mr. Baxter Throws Injun Jim Clinstock

North Carolina's pale-face, Laverne Baxter, defeated Jim Clinstock, self-styled Oklahoma Indian, last night in 31 minutes of the feature bout at Griffith Stadium before 700 rabid wrestling fans who displayed their intense interest by whistling snatches of "Little Sir Echo" between yawns.

Clinstock took the lead at the outset and was kicking the unhappy Laverne all around the ring. Suddenly deciding to take things easy he halted his roughhouse tactics, walked into several of Baxter's flailing elbows and went down for the count.

The semiwindup, featuring a polka by Chief Chewaki and Jules Strongbow, stole the show although it was a 30-minute draw. The Chief and Jules took a joint leap over the ropes into row B and continued their argument there until Chewaki broke up a chair and split open Jules' head. Jules withdrew into the ring dragging the Chief behind him and hurling him out the other side Chewacki came back with a woman fan's slipper and was again working on Jules' bleeding cranium as the final gong rang.

In the preliminaries, Tiger Joe Marsh defeated Tex Hammer in 18 minutes with a body press; Pete Managoff beat Ernie Powers in 21 minutes with a cradle hold, and Jack Hader beat Hank Metheny in 20½ minutes with a series of kangaroo kicks.

U.S. Assured of Net Title in French Hard-Court Play

Paris, June 15.—The singles title in the French tennis championships is going to the United States.

Little Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, made certain of that today when he defeated Otto Szigetti, of Hungary, 6—3, 6—0, 6—4, insemifinal match. Tomorrow Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, and Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., meet to see which plays Riggs in the final.

Last year the title was won by Don Budge before he turned professional.

Riggs didn't have enough competition today to get up a sweat. Szigetti committed frequent foot faults at the start of the match and never recovered from that setback.

Snead to Enter Britsh Open Golf Tourney

White Sulphur prings, W. Va., June 15 (AP).—Sammy Snead, one of the favorites to capture the British Open golf title despite his last-hole loss of the U. S. Open, sent word back to his home club today he'll sail June 21 for England.

The Slammer telegraphed he will board the Queen Mary on that date provided his passport can be issued and a visa obtained in time.

Snead, now playing in the Inverness tournament at Toledo, Ohio, is a 12-1 favorite in the British event along with Henry Cotton, the English stylist.

The championship will be played July 3-8.

Izaak Walton's Books Revealed

reprinted in all forms—abridged, unabridged and what have you—there's nothing like the real thing for getting first hand knowledge about what veteran anglers are said to call the finny tribe.

The finny tribe, however, cannot hold a candle to Walton's old English witticisms and methods of discourse in the raw, as it were, in the way of interest.

There is a time, though, when it becomes sort of touch and go when Walton begins talking about the habits of the salmon and the fine sensitiveness of the trout—which his work says can see, hear and smell the angler by night (chapter 5, first edition).

Walton's first edition of "The Compleat Angler: Or the Contemplative Man's Recreation," was printed in 1652 in London. He brought out subsequent editions in 1655, 1661, 1668 and 1676—the last being a much enlarged edition.

By way of a preface, Walton addresses his opening remarks to "the reader of this discourse, but especially to the Honest Angler."

"I think it fitting to tell thee these following truths, that I did not undertake to write, or to publish this discourse of fish and fishing to please myself," Walton begins.

"And I wish the reader also to take notice that in writing it . . . I have in several places mixt some innocent mirth; of which if thou be a severe, or sowr complexioned man, then I here disallow thee to be a competent judge."

It is Walton's observations on the nature of fish that hint of his humor.

Bold When Hungry

"The pike is observed to be a solitary, melancholy and a bold fish," he observes. "Melancholy, because he always swimmes or rests himself alone and never swimmes in sholes or with company; bold, because in the height of his hunger he will bite at and devour a dog that swims in his pond."

Walton adds philosophically, "the belly has no ears when hunger comes to it."

But about that salmon—Walton compares the salmon to a rich man who has a winter and summer home, the open sea and the fresh water of a river. He observes sadly that the salmon, when left behind in fresh water when the run to the sea begins, often "pine away and dye."

Walton also mentions that the jawbones, heart and ga'l of the pike is considered "very medicinable," being used at that time to cure "divers diseases, stop bleeding, abate fevers, cure agues, oppose or expell infection of plague and to be many ways medicinable and useful for the good of mankind." As a postscript, he added that the bite of the pike was said to be "venomous and hard to be cured."

While the five original Waltons are kept under lock and key in the library's rare book files, Curator Parma is easily inveigled into bringing out his prizes for the view of the "contemplative" brotherhood.

Lou Brouillard To Arrive Today

Lou Brouillard, former world's middleweight and welterweight champion, is expected to arrive in Washington from Boston today to finish training for his 10-round fight Monday night at Griffith Stadium with Georgie Abrams, local fighter.

Johnny Buckley, Lou's manager, notified local boxing officials yesterday he planned to leave Boston late last night. Brouillard is to hold two public workouts, tomorrow and Sunday at 2 p. m., at the National Sporting Gym, 519 Morse street northeast.

Abrams will finish training at Stillman's Gym in New York and come to his home town Sunday to rest up.

Bill Ackerman

on Fishing

With hardheads being what they are, and as thick as fleas on a tramp dog, there is little use in noting they may be taken in countless numbers at Solomons Ridge, on the Gooses, in Herring Bay—in fact at any place on the lower Potomac and all over the Chesapeake Bay. If there is any place where they aren't to be found, we haven't heard about it. Just pick your favorite spot and get going, but remember, they're much like trees—kill only what you have use for.

ACKERMAN

The condition so prevalent a few short years ago, when countless rotting fish could be found around every dock and landing from one end of the bay country to the other, is fast disappearing, in spite of the occasional catches of hundreds and hundreds which here and there you still come across. The modern angler has learned that it is possible to have his fun, and return unharmed those for which he has no use. We like the slogan—Fish not for your neighbor, but for yourself.

Rock fishing in the rivers at the head of the spawning runs has been decidedly off, so if you are going to fish the Susquehanna or the Potomac better fish for pike in the first and catfish in the latter.

Use Plenty of Lead

Further down is a different story. At Piney Point the boats have been increasing the size of their catches almost daily. In the Chester River, the same holds true. In Eastern Bay and the Choptank the catches are almost whatever one cares to make them, but taken as is usual at this time of the year, by trolling deep. Which, in simple words, means almost as much lead to get the spreader and lures down as there are pounds in the fish you catch. Still alright, and lots of fun if you are satisfied more in the final results than in the manner of pursuing your sport.

The shrimp chummers are getting a nice catch here and there, and, as the fish school, the better this type of fishing will get. The only trouble, the scarcity of green shrimp, and when they are to be had, the price is a real stumbling block for many fishermen—from $4 to $6 a gallon.

The past week has seen the tide of sports angling set toward the beaches and offshore fishing, and that is perfectly normal at this time, for, with the big weakies to be had at most every inlet and on every wreck from Diamond Shoals to Peconic Bay, and channel bass running the breakers within easy reach of surfmen, why shouldn't the trend be toward this sportier fishing. Until the sea trout and blues mount our own waters and join forces with the schooled rockfish.

Only 2 Good Spots

We have only heard of an occasional blue being caught along the Virginia shore of the lower bay. The catches that you have been hearing about were taken by commercial men in nets. The sports angler in this section generally gets his innings late this month, continuing through July and August. In the meantime, the cobia have hit in, and we have been able to note catches of one and two from almost every fishing point from Messick to Reedville. On Sunday, Capt. T. S. Clopton, at Gloucester Point, brought in two, one weighing 22 pounds, the other 31. Still rather small to the midsummer average, but worth anyone's time to give them a whirl. The same day he caught one 4½-pound bluefish. Sea trout are running strong in this section of the Old Dominion, and the hardheads, as everywhere, in countless numbers.

If you must have bluefishing, it looks as though there are but two places to choose from to get them. Along the North Carolina coast south of Oregon Inlet and on the Maryland coast off Ocean City. At the latter place, although in actual numbers the catches are smaller, the individual fish are larger, running up to around 4½ pounds. However, why worry about numbers when they are running from 50 and 60 up to more than 100.

William Graham, of Mardella Springs, Md., was the lucky angler of the week. He won the Game Fisherman's Association prize of a Pflueger rod and reel with a bluefish weighing an even 5 pounds, caught fishing with Capt. Fred Savage on the Lida S.

Talk of White Marlin

The main conversation at this shore resort isn't, however, of blues and mackerel and big weakies but of white marlin, for with the passing of just another short week the time will be ripe for the taking of the first marlin of the season, if the time of catching the first fish during the past two years is any criterion for judging the taking of the first this year. And why not? The season is advanced as well as any other we have ever noted.

The local boats are in fine shape and ready for the best the big gamesters have to offer. There is the addition to the fleet of several new ones. Capt. Lev Raymond arrives today from Atlantic City with a Lev-Lou it will be hard to recognize—outriggers on which may be mounted a movie camera, so that an entirely new angle may be had of landing a big fish, and a cockpit cleaned of all incidentals but the four fighting chairs. Capt. Leo Droughton will shortly be on his way north with his Sampan, as will several other Florida guides, to run out of Ocean City for the first time.

This year's American team to compete in the international tuna angling cup matches is being selected by outdoor writers from every section of the United States. While we don't believe that is the best way to select the anglers most capable of fighting the big horse mackerel in fast time, nevertheless we have added our 5 cents' worth with the hope that it might possibly help balance the scales. We note our selection now.

Townsend the Captain

Paul Townsend, our only local representative in competitive big game fishing, to captain the team for the third successive year; Laddie Sanford of Amsterdam, New York; Hugo Rutherford, Allemuchy, New Jersey and Kip Farrington, jr., New York. Alternates to be Bill Hurst of Baltimore and Ben Crowningshield of Boston.

Mike Lerner rates on any representative team, but his plans seldom allow him the chance to join in this competitive fishing that has grown until five countries are represented by teams. Many others along the whole length of the Atlantic coast have every right to be considered, but because we don't know them so well, they must of course be passed by.

The Gulf Stream fishing off the outer banks of North Carolina is open. The first amberjack of this season was caught more than two weeks ago. This week saw the going gain considerable momentum when a party came in with six dolphin weighing between 12 and 18½ pounds, and three amberjacks from 15 to 17½ pounds. A large cobia was caught by another angler off Ocracoke.

From now on most fishermen pursuing their sport out of Hatteras will be fishing the Gulf Stream and the wrecks in the shoal water on Diamond Shoals between the point and the lightship. Only shallow draft boats are able to get to the best grounds, where amberjack, barracuda, dolphin and bonita swarm on the old wrecks, some of them centuries old.

Fishing for cobia, or coalfish, as the commercial men call them, is relatively a new sport in this section. From the number caught last season, we wouldn't be at all surprised to see these grounds prove as lucrative as our lower Chesapeake Bay, where this fishing is just getting under way.

Out in Front Again

The Cape Charles area, which produced the world record species of this game fish last year, weighing 102 pounds, is out in front already this season with a 55-pound fish caught just this past week.

Word just comes from Tocopilla, Chile, that Kip Farrington caught a 236-pound broadbill swordfish, the smallest ever taken in these waters where, since the inception of this fishing five years ago, it has been thought only the adults of the species were to be found. The large fish taken in the cold Humboldt current have broken the world's record four times. It is still held there.

On the same day he caught the small broadbill Farrington had six strikes and caught six fish, among them three marlin. This is probably some kind of a record, too, for we have never heard of any sportsman catching a marlin and a broadbill on the same day in the same place.

Black bass season opened yesterday in New Jersey and will remain so until November 30. Local anglers who have been fishing this section in yearly increasing numbers are advised to note the legal size and bag limits. Both the smallmouth and the largemouth, called Oswego here, must be 9 inches to be creeled legally. The minimum on calico bass and crappie is 6 inches.

Daily bag limits are 10 in all of black bass, 20 rock bass, 20 in all of calico bass and crappie.

Gamest Freshwater Fish

The legal protection accorded bass in New Jersey during the natural breeding season in open waters, coupled with an extensive restocking of public waters with young fish raised in the famous Hachettstown hatchery, has contributed in building up a large supply of this fish, rated by anglers everywhere as the gamest freshwater fish. For ten years this State has stressed and led in the movement to prohibit its sale. We wish Maryland might see fit to do likewise.

For several weeks the trout streams of Maryland have been low, and fish have been taken only by dry fly. The rain of this week has corrected this condition, and most waters should be in prime condition for this week-end, even though some were running slightly riled on Wednesday. With but two more weeks of the season to go, this fishing can't be put off much longer.

The State has finished trout stocking operations for this year and commenced to distribute bass and crappie, but there are plenty in every stream we know of, for those who fish their flies dry.

The bill by Congressman Karl for the correction of the pollution of our streams and passed by in favor of the Barkley bill, which in no way would accomplish the end hoped, for by real conservationists, was known as H. R. 4170. It has been rewritten to eliminate all reasonable and legitimate objections while still retaining effective control features. It now bears the new number, H. R. 6723.

If you have a Congressman, you are urged to obtain his support for its substitution as an amendment to the Barcley bill, when the latter comes on the floor of the House. Otherwise, if we are to get a start on the correction of the pollution during the next ten years, the Barkley bill must be defeated. Special activity of the Izaak Walton League of America with the co-operation of other conservation organizations is having a real effect on members, who are beginning to see the need of a real bill that will stop pollution of our streams—the Mundt bill, H. R. 6723.

Naval Air Nine Strengthens Lead

Naval Air Station bolstered its grip on first place in the U. S. Government Baseball League yesterday by defeating the second-place Pepco nine, 6-4, on the North Ellipse. Naval Air Station has won six games and lost one. Pepco has won as many but has dropped three.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, June 15.—It takes all kinds of amateurs to make up the world of the A. A. U., but nonetheless it's interesting to note that the two extreme poles of simon pure sport—the Poughkeepsie Regatta and the Princeton Mile—will be battling for patronage at the very same hour tomorrow.

CONSIDINE

Tonight, along the bleak boathouses fastened to the side of the Hudson, dozens of big Spartan blokes are snoring on their bare cots. With no chance of ever making a nickel out of it, they have labored for eight months for tomorrow's crew races. They have adhered to the strictest diets enforced on any athlete. They have trained until the very sight of one of those glandular canoes must fill them with despondency.

A vast majority of them are thoroughly unproselyted. They embraced galley slavery just for the exercise. Seven out of every eight men in a shell know they might go through their entire competitive career without ever seeing their name in print or ever rising above the grim anonymity of a convict-like number. Even the stroke oar is unknown, nine times out of ten. The rich alumnus, whose office doors are open to all football heroes who disintegrate into the insurance business, bolts the latch when a member of the college's crew wants to get in to talk about that 20-year endowment. The alumnus never heard of the guy.

One Mistake Is Fatal for Crewmen

The galley slave is the too-perfect amateur. He gives all for nothing. Like an umpire, the best thing can be said about him is nothing. And still like an umpire, he is constantly in danger of wholesale censure if he makes a mistake. If he "catches a crab," and destroys the rhythm of the stroke, he is stripped of his namelessness and exposed as piteously as was Roy Riegels. No wonder he's inclined to be a big glum goof, excessively moral, barren of humor, and filled with a love of rowing that amounts to a phobia. He'd have to love it, to stand it.

On the other hand we have the grossly commercial Princeton mile, which threatened to collapse this year when one of the more important principals yelled bloody murder, and said he wouldn't run when he discovered that one of the other artists was getting more dough than he was scheduled to get. With the best interests of amateurism at heart, the hesitant hoofer finally broke down and agreed to appear in the gallop—after a brief conference with the promoters.

We don't expect to, or want to, know the cost of bringing together Sydney Wooderson, Glenn Cunningham, Chick Fenske and the rest of the field that will pound around Princeton's bouncy cinder oval. You can be pretty sure though that the meeting of the great amateurs will be about as amateur as a game between the New York Yankees and Joe Louis. Nobody is going away hungry, and that, of course, is the way it should be—for they'll be asking some pretty fancy prices at the gate.

What, No Pari-Mutuel Windows?

It does seem curious, however, that the thing is presented as amateur entertainment, when there wouldn't even be a race—at least as good a race as this will be—if the promoters had treated the runners like amateurs. They tried it on one of them, and the guy yelled foul. It is too bad that the New Jersey racing bill has been detained, or Princeton could sell pari mutuel tickets on the race.

With the decline of the great Washington crew, which was stroked by Don Hume, Poughkeepsie is a wide open event. Navy broke the record in winning it last year, but hasn't looked as good in workouts as California, whose boat bladed through the full 4-mile course the other day in 18:35. The Princeton mile is as much of a toss-up. If those English clockers aren't kidding us, Wooderson is the fastest middle distance runner who ever lived. The way Fenske has been running of late—particularly the way he's been knocking off Cunningham—would indicate that he's going to make the Briton transpire in founts, for Sydney can't be up to his best form after his recent ocean voyage. Cunningham has been up to West Point where Roland Logan, the Army trainer, worked the kinks out of the old gent's legs and back. We know of no greater favor we can render Cunningham than to predict that he'll run last—for every time any writer has tried to shovel a little literary dirt into the old gaffer's grave, he bounds up and runs better than ever.

Gibson and Spencer To Meet in Exhibition

Andy Gibson, Maryland Open champion from Bonnie View, and Rut Coffey, Winchester (Va.) pro, will meet Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam mentor, and Bob Barnett, Chevy Chase, Sunday at 2 p. m. in the annual pro exhibition match at Beaver Dam.

The public is invited.

Haig, Sarazen Tie for Lead In Toledo Golf

Toledo, Ohio, June 15.—Three teams fired five under par 66s today to take the lead in the fifth annual Inverness four-ball matches, but more important than that was the return of Walter Hagen to the form which won for him scores of tournaments in the last quarter century.

"The Haig" and his teammate, Gene Sarazen, finished the opening day tied for last place with two other pairs, but the veteran star, making his third competitive start of the year, scored all four birdies counted by his side as he and Sarazen dropped a 2-up decision to Horton Smith and "Lighthorse Harry" Cooper.

The opening matches between the 16 star professionals, which found 36 birdies and an eagle trickling into Inverness' tricky cups, ended like this: (Best ball scores in parenthesis).

Byron Nelson and Harold (Jug) McSpaden (66), even with Sam Snead and Vic Ghezzi (66).

Smith and Cooper (66), 2 up on Hagen and Sarazen (68).

Denny Shute and E. J. (Dutch) Harrison (66), 2 up on Jimmy Thomson and Tommy Armour (68).

Henry Picard and Johnny Revolta (66), 2 up on Ed Dudley and Ky Laffoon (68).

D. C. Tennis Team Slight Favorite In Hotchkiss Cup

Without District Champion Barney Welsh and Hugh Lynch, who played No. 2 last year and also the crack doubles team of Lieuts. Jim Farrin and Bill Howard, the Washington tennis team will be only a slight favorite to retain the Hotchkiss Cup for the sixth successive year over Baltimore, Richmond and Norfolk in inter-city matches today and tomorrow at the Baltimore Country Club.

Washington has won the cup ten times, Baltimore, nine, and Richmond, once. Norfolk has yet to score a victory.

In the absence of Welsh and Lynch, 18-year-old Davie Johnsen, recent singles and doubles winner in the City of Washington tournament, will be Washington's No. 1 player, Capt. Dooly Mitchell announced last night. The squad also will include Ralph (Buddy) Adair, Tom Moorhead, Ricky Willis, Alphonso Smith, Dick Murphy and Tom Mangan, only local player who participated in the first Hotchkiss match in 1921.

Sharkey, Hufty, Overton Gain Golf Semifinal

golf that was the best of the day. He halved nine holes in each match, and won five. He was always up on his Monumental City opponents, and any golfer that wades through a pair of championship flight opponents, never losing a hole, has accomplished a good shot-making performance.

None of the matches was close in the entire morning and afternoon first flight results. Peacock, Indian Spring ace, was 4 up at the end of seven holes against M. Parker Nolan, Congressional, and held the margin through the fifteenth, winning 4 and 3, while in the afternoon he was held even by Kenwood's club champion, Johnny Bergelin, at the turn, but all pars and birdies on the back nine accounted for a 4 and 3 victory.

Adams Shows Form

Overton, the steadiest player in the event, and the most feared, according to the locker room talk, polished Shea off in the first round with little difficulty and then turned on Adams in the afternoon, winning 4 and 3. Adams, University of Virginia student, son of Senator Adams, of Colorado, came through with one remarkable recovery after the other in upsetting Bogart in the morning, but lost his touch against Overton.

Hufty, the host club champion and one of the finest golfers of the city, based on an all-time record, is lurking quietly in the semi-finals. He was in the middle-seventies in both rounds, winning comfortably over Forest Thompson, Beaver Dam, and Louis Fuchs, Congressional, 4 and 3 each.

Sharkey and Peacock, clubmates, will battle it out in the upper-bracket semifinals while Overton and Hufty will match cards in the lower. The young stars are banking on Sharkey to salvage their prestige, but they were laying 2 to 1 on Peacock, at one time the best golfer in this section, who is apparently back in form.

Overton will be within speaking distance of par against Hufty, that's a known fact, and whether the Chevy Chase ace can match or beat his game will rest his final round chances.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris

SEPTEMBER PROMISES a chain of appearances by some of the country's biggest of "big name bands" at a large Washington spot and at (good news!) popular prices. Orchestras to be booked will be of the caliber and class of Charlie Barnet's, Kay Kyser's and similar top units. While previous Washington ventures of this type have been colossal flooperoos, this project is being worked out by a group of highly practical businessmen. It'll be different, we'll wager.

ROYAL CHEF: The Shoreham's Chef Jacques Haeringer was called to the White House last week to help prepare the dinner for the King and Queen. But we always knew that M. Haeringer's cooking was fit for a king.

CUBAN DUO-GUITAR: A pair of handsome Cuban singing and guitar-playing lads, fresh from Manhattan, will make their bow at Madrillon's cocktail and supper dance hours next Monday. With Carr and Don, this means that Madrillon will have both duo-piano and duo-guitar playing, not to mention that duo-aircooling system that works with such pleasant efficiency.

SOUSASTOUNDING! Bill Dunmore's combination of "The Washington Post March" with "Hold Tight" set the Wardman Mertonome Room patrons right on their ears last evening. The Penguins had to play it four times, are going to include the number in their regular dance music repertoire. Laurels to Chet De Chastain, too, for his microphone oratory on Sousa and the "W. P. March."

P. S. A witty caller suggests a theme song for another local sheet —"The Merry-Go-Round Broke Down."

"CHAMPAGNE INTERLUDES" began their bubbling course at the Lounge Riviera last night, with the Normans, of the Arthur Murray School, doing all the dances of yesteryear. The Riviera management awarded champagne to the customers who danced most nimbly with the Normans. More fun! "Champagne Interludes" are in order every eve now at Riviera.

SURGEONS SCORED on Durward Bowersox, the Rainbow Room's master violinist, a day or two ago. He's now at Sibley Hospital (probably gossiping with the pretty nurses) but will be back on the Rainbow bandstand next week.

U-NAME-IT ROOF GARDEN: Fifty big round dollars are yours if you can choose the winning name for the breezy and good-looking roof garden to be opened tomorrow night atop the Holbrook Farms Dairy Building out northeast. A great opportunity to have a big evening and improve your finances at the same time.

TOO DELICIOUS is the new cuisine introduced at Maryland Gardens by that expert epicure, Manager Raymond Jumeal. Chicken breast stuffed with creamed mushrooms, parfaits swimming with red raspberries and toasted pecans—these are just two of the many luxury items.

RINGSIDE CAMERA: Mayflower Lounge. Mrs. Harold H. Sims (British Embassy) entertaining a large luncheon party, including Mrs. Edgar Prochnik, wife of the former Austrian Minister, very striking in a hat with a long red scarf.

Roger Smith Powhatan Roof Garden. Singer Peggy Townsend, even prettier than usual in red with icy crystals, chattering to a passel of her young society friends.

Neptune Room. Charles Lully, owner of Harvey's, and his pal, Lawyer Julian Richards, giving their indorsement to mint juleps.

Carlton Cocktail Lounge. No room to either stand up or sit down because of the crowd of newspaper columnists and recuperating businessmen.

King Cole Room, Byron Gay, composer of "The Navy Goat," Annapolis class song of 1922, listening to it pianoed by his classmate, Vincent Gallagher, owner of the K. C. 2, and Hour Glass.

Hi Hat. Joe Teuschert, doyen of Washington commercial photographers; has been taking pictures around town for nigh on 30 years. Knows a tremendous lot about night spots, too.

Lotus. Bertram J. Lang, young ad executive, enjoying the luncheon showing of the "Six Graces Revue," with the newspaper bunch.

Mayfair. Newsman Sam Degges and his pretty wife discussing the perils of softball with Promotion Manager Jimmy Byrd.

FOOD PREFERRED. Those Sunday family dinners at Griffith Farms Tavern. Fine food, finely cooked. Take all the youngsters and let them play on the lawn while you rest from gormandizing.

Sea food sessions in the outdoor garden down at Hall's. If it swims, Hall's know how to cook and serve it to perfection.

IT'S LAST CALL for Wally Steofler's sharp dance music at Glen Echo. On Monday comes Lang Thompson's Orchestra with what Press Agent Al Wilkins inspiredly terms the "velvet lift of swing."

"Take it easy, pal," says Evelyn to Jack Barclay as they go into their rope-skipping dance at Bamboo Gardens

Tax Revision By Congress Is Held Essential

Increase in Incomes Vital Need, Says N. Y. State Comptroller

Saranac Inn, N. Y., June 15.—Morris S. Tremaine, New York State Comptroller, addressing the annual convention of the New York State League of Savings and Loan Associations here today, recommended a complete revision of the Federal tax structure. This, he said, would be a powerful factor in advancing our national income, the paramount need of the moment.

"The national income and Government expenditures are a problem about which we all should be thinking," he said. "Income and expenditures must bear a proper relationship to preserve solvency. This premise concerns every individual, all business and all governments, and we should all be studying how to preserve the soundness of individual, commercial and governmental credits.

"The most important problem before this Nation today is how to increase the national income, which means, in simple language, how to increase the income of the individual. It is everyone's job. Too often we have heard men say 'The trouble is. . . .' It is high time we tired of this expression and proceeded to show the way to accomplish results."

U. S. and British Debt

"Today the public debt in the United States—national, State and local—is something over $100 per capita. In England it is something over $1,000 per capita. So that if our public debts were increased by 150 per cent we would be in the same relative position as the British Isles.

"But it is not so much what we owe, but the direction in which we are going, and it is certain we are going in the wrong direction, and in due course we must balance the national budget. No nation ever reduced taxes to any great extent except, of course, following wars.

"It must be obvious when taxes begin to decline, it is a result of the decline in the growth of a country. So that the only possible way of balancing our public budget is to increase the growth of the country, the growth of business and the growth of the national wealth, thus making more jobs, a greater volume of business and more public revenue, although less in relation to national income."

Complete Revision Urged

"Therefore, all legislation should be encouraging rather than repressing, and taxes should promote rather than retard the activities of our people. We know definitely from the record that the extreme conditions of the undistributed profits tax, the loss and gains tax, the upper brackets of the income tax, the capital stock tax and some few other taxes, have definitely retarded business.

"We must earn the money as individuals to build up the national income from which we can provide revenues beyond our expenditures to meet our public debts. Therefore, it is my suggestion and my firm belief, that a complete revision of our tax structure, especially the modification of the extreme conditions referred to, would be the powerful factor in advancing our national income, and should redound to the credit and glory of our Congress and the Federal Administration."

Urges Tax Changes

Idle Bank Funds Drop $20,000,000

The Federal Reserve Board estimated yesterday that the banks had $4,280,000,000 of idle excess reserves on June 14, a decrease of $20,000,000 from the preceding week.

The decrease was ascribed primarily to a $50,000,000 temporary decrease of money in circulation due to preparations for midmonth pay rolls.

Associated Gas Output

New York, June 15.—For the week ended June 9, Associated Gas & Electric System reports net electric output of 91,436,410 units. This is an increase of 10,588,168 units or 13.1 per cent above production of 80,848,242 units for a year ago. Gross output, including sales to other utilities, amounted to 98,651,625 units for the current week.

Wheat Tumbles With Reports Of Kansas Yield

Elevator Company Estimates Larger Production There

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 15.—Wheat prices dropped a cent or more from early highs today following release of an authoritative elevator company estimate of increased Kansas production and reports of good crop conditions in Canada.

An opening advance that carried quotations upward as much as ⅝ cent gave way to selling that wiped out the gains and substituted net losses of as much as ⅝ cent, July contracts, representing the new crop, being the weakest. Hedging sales were in evidence.

The Robinson Elevator Co. made the bearish estimate of Kansas production, suggesting a crop of 122,293,000 bushels, or about 20,000,000 larger than the last forecast. The increase was attributed to better yields than expected. The Government's June 1 forecast was 105,530,000 bushels. Harvest last year totaled 152,114,000 bushels.

Wheat closed at the day's lows, ⅛@¾ lower than yesterday, July 73⅛@73, September 73¾@73⅝. Corn was unchanged to ⅜ down, July 49⅛, September 50⅝@50⅛; oats ⅛@¾ off; rye ⅛@1⅝ lower and lard 2 to 7 lower.

Cotton Futures 20-40 Cents Off In Dull Trading

New York, June 15 (AP).—Cotton futures lost 4 to 8 points today in a lackadaisical trade. Near months dipped under foreign and commission house liquidation and selling by a leading spot interest who bought new crops months against sales of July. Principal support came from trade shorts and other spot interests, apparently price fixing for mill account.

Numerous small hedge sales were distributed through all new crop deliveries, with Bombay taking most of these offerings.

Cottonseed Oil

Concentrated selling in new crop cottonseed oil deliveries touched off a flow of liquidation that dropped prices 8 to 12 points and the day's lows. Sales totaled 132 lots; July, *6.55; September, *6.72; December, 6.86; January, 6.90. (*Bid).

Crude oil in the Southeast and Valley was quoted 5½ cents nominal and Texas, 5¾ cents nominal.

Reaction Continues and Volume Rises Widest Break in Prices Since May 16 News From the Far East an Adverse Factor

New York, June 15.—The reaction in the stock market continued today and it assumed more important proportions, particularly in the final hour, when the tenor of news from the Far East took on a more serious note. The decline was the fourth consecutive one and the average loss of 0.80 point was the largest break since May 16. At the low for the day the average was at its worst since May 24, having erased 27 per cent of the April-June recovery.

Volume on the big board mounted to 538,710 shares, the most active day since a week ago, and trading increased on the decline. From the high of the recovery reached June 9 and 10, to the low of today, there has been a loss in the composite average of 1.81 points. During the short reaction which occurred between May 10 and 17 this composite dropped 2.11 points, this reaction being the only one of importance to the present one.

Closings at Low

While the market closed today at virtually the low for the session, indicating that more selling will have to be absorbed tomorrow, the bullish forces were not too perturbed. They have on their side an indication of a reversal in the business trend which should continue provided the threat of war does not become more pronounced. We appear to be coming into another period, all too familiar in the last year or two, when Europe and Asia are shaping the course of values on our security exchanges.

As far as the domestic situation is concerned, there has been a definite improvement, marred only by the disturbance created in business by warring factions within the ranks of labor. There is a limit to what business can do about this situation for the fights which are developing appear to be based more on differences between labor units than on disagreements about wages.

In other respects there is a basis for the belief that business could easily improve from this level. Inventories are at a low level and prices of materials are such as to encourage replenishments.

Trade News Favorable

Trade news today was encouraging, being featured by the carloading report which showed loadings for the week ended June 10 at a new high for the year and 80,743 cars above those of the same week last year. Compared with the preceding week, which contained a holiday, there was an improvement of 11.8 per cent. The best improvement was shown by miscellaneous loadings and in the less-than-carload lot business.

Commodities eased with securities, an upward revision in private Kansas crop estimates injuring wheat. The moisture situation in Canada also was reported better. Wheat futures closed off ½ to ¾ cent a bushel. Cotton displayed an easier tone in heavy trading, failing to follow firmer Liverpool cables. The close was off 4 to 8 points.

Bonds Dull and Lower

Listed bonds continued to drift lower today in another dull session. The prevailing sentiment was much like that of the equities department. Dealers saw no particular reason for holding either high grade or speculative securities, and the small dribble of liquidation lowered levels of all groups. United States Treasury issues showed only small fractional declines, but other bonds dipped more decidedly. Foreign dollar obligations were quite soft on the latest international developments. Turnover was only $5,630,000.

Engineering construction awards also were bullish, the gain over a year ago being 90 per cent although 34 per cent below the high total reported forthe previous week. For the year today, construction is running 24 per cent ahead of 1938.

A. T. & T. Off 5 Points

Featuring today's stock trading was a break of 5 points in American Telephone & Telegraph. Selling followed the submission of the report of the Federal Communications Commission, which recommended that the system be brought more under Federal control. The report itself contained no surprises, for the inquiry was a one-sided affair in which the Federal board did not permit the company to call its own witnesses or cross-examine the witnesses of the commission. Apparently it was too much to expect that a New Deal agency would look with a favorable eye on a company that was able to maintain its dividend rate throughout the depression.

The day's selling, which was pronounced during the final hour, produced some other sizable losses, Union Carbide falling 4 and Westinghouse nearly as much. Loss of 1 to 3 points were sustained by such leaders as United States Rubber, the day's most active stock, Steel, Chrysler, Motors, Bethlehem, Manville, Sears, General Electric and Anaconda.

Long-term United States Government bonds were off 1-32 to 5-32 point, but there were signs of renewed institutional interest in some of the medium-dated obligations. The drop of the last ten days now amounts to about ¾ point in the indicative bonds, with one or two issues off a full point. Guaranteed bonds of the Farm and Home corporations were relatively steady today. Telephone bonds fell fractionally, and best power and light issues also lost ground. High-grade rails and industrials were negelcted.

Prime Rail Issues Slip

The better rated speculative railroad bonds slipped lower by fractions in most instances, and some bonds fell a full point. Borderline and default rails dropped slowly. Holding company bonds and industrial convertibles followed the general trend. Fresh losses appeared in most local traction bonds, and the decline was extended in amusement, communications and other special groups.

Japanese government bonds were only ⅛ point lower on the latest fracas at Tientsin, for most large American holdings have been liquidated. Polish bonds improved, while Italians receded. The highest rated foreigns reflected fresh concern over the international picture. German and other European default bonds were marked down. Brazilians fell on indications that only a single "token" payment will be made July 1 by that country, and other Latin-Americans were under pressure.

Recovery Needs Business Buying, Says Col. Ayres

Cleveland, June 15 (AP).—Col. Leonard P. Ayres declared today that banking figures "continue furnishing evidence that it is deficient business purchasing, and not deficient individual purchasing, that is mainly responsible for protracting this depression."

Writing in the monthly business bulletin of the Cleveland Trust Co., of which he is a vice president, the statistician-economist said:

"As a Nation we have spent in this depression many billions of public and private funds to increase and spread individual purchasing power. We have done it by advancing wage rates, paying bonus money to veterans and farmers, by lavish outlays for public works, and through huge spending for relief benefits.

"It long ago became evident that as these funds are spent by the individual recipients, they flow into business channels, and are used by businessmen in part to sustain slow-speed business operations, and in large measure to build up bank balances. They are not actively stimulating revival or rapidly reducing unemployment. Instead they are accumulating in the banks as demand deposits which are largely those of businessmen and of corporations."

Hitler Eliminates Foreign Holders From Reichsbank

Berlin, June 15 (AP).—Reichsbank President Walther Funk announced tonight that a new law reorganizing the bank, placing it directly under the orders of Chancellor Hitler and eliminating foreigners from holding shares, would be published tomorrow in the Official Gazette.

Funk said that foreigners who hold Reichsbank shares would be recompensed 100 per cent for the surrender of them. It was estimated that foreigners hold 35,000,000 to 40,000,000 Reichsmarks ($14,000,000 to $16,000,000) of the total of 150,000,000 Reichsmarks ($60,000,000) of Reichsbank shares.

Funk disclosed that Hitler himself had drawn up proposals for recompensing foreign holders which are to be passed on by a general assembly meeting of the bank called for June 30.

These proposals offer foreigners two shares of the gold discount Bank bearing 4 per cent interest for each Reichsbank share they hold. Income from the new shares is to be guaranteed by the German government. It will be transferable to foreign currencies so that foreigners may get their money abroad.

If Hitler's proposals are accepted by the stockholders—and Funk said there was little doubt they would be—the Gold Discount Bank shares will begin bearing interest this year. German holders of Reichsbank stock will receive new shares in place of those now held.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

The art of forcing declarer, weakening his trump suit, and thereby completing his destruction, which was developed to a high point by the whisters, is practically lost to contract players. Due to the strong, almost invincible trump suits of today, such strategy has become outmoded, but occasionally a situation develops wherein it would be useful.

One of the Olympic deals demonstrates the efficacy of such defense.

It is shown in today's box. The contract is four spades. South has two hearts and a club trick; he must develop another to set the contract. How shall he do it?

South opens the heart king and proceeds with two more rounds, East trumping the third. It would be unwise for South to lead his singleton diamond, as he has no reason to believe he can win a ruff and his strong heart suit and long trumps indicate a forcing game.

East should provide for a bad spade break and lead the club queen at once in an effort to steal a trick and avoid another force. An alert South, however, will jump in with the club ace and lead a fourth round of hearts, even though declarer may ruff in one hand and discard from the other.

South cannot lose by this play. If the force is taken in dummy, his ten becomes a winner because of its favorable position behind the ace nine. If the ruff is taken in declarer's hand, South holds one more trump than East and therefore must make it.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

SOME TREMORS are running through Federal Communications Commission minor employes over the prospects of confronting June 30 when—unless Congress acts—the commission won't even have beer money.

But no one in official capacity there is bothered. It would be unprecedented for Congress to close the doors on an agency generally regarded as necessary to the governmental functioning. The funds will come through; but at the moment the agency is poor and getting poorer. It won't even be able to stagger along after the close of this month.

It was left out of the first and second appropriations bills. And the commission still needs what it originally asked for, $2,038,135, an increase of $293,000 over last year. There are reports that the FCC and the House Appropriations Committee are engaged in a feud, but this rumor is denied within the commission. They admit, however, that one member of the committee has it in for them.

Government employes who start out this summer to look for native art outside World's Fair grounds can go equipped with a set of true-or-false tests designed to tell them instantly whether they are finding the real thing.

Willard J. Beatty, educational director in the Office of Indian Affairs, said he worked out the tests to answer a flood of questions from visitors to the Golden Gate Expositions. Connoisseurs of Indian arts, Beatty said, have worked out a number of practical tests to detect the difference between genuine and spurious Indian articles.

For example, experts can tell with a single sniff whether a handsome beaded buckskin jacket came out of the factory or the wigwam. A good, smoky odor tells that the skin was cured over some Indian's open fire, even though the finished jacket has a zipper front used on some of the latest Indian models, according to Beatty.

Genuine Eskimo ivory carving can still be distinguished from bone imitations because ivory is colder than bone, and weighs more. This test holds for the products of Eskimos, who do their carving with modern dentists' drills, Beatty said.

A DANCE RECITAL, "Star Dust," by the playhouse group of Federal Employes Union, No. 2, will be presented in the Agriculture Department auditorium Thursday, June 22. Director of the dance group is Hazel P. Richards and the members include Helene Heinrich, Doris Lundquist, Thelma Almklov, Virginia Gaddess, Lorena Schnieder, Elsie Ross and Olga Smith. Others on the program are Dan Mularkey, of the Florida State Society; Winifred Bowman and R. C. Rambo.

THE STORY of the great homestead rush into the Middle West will be dramatized in the twentieth of the Interior Department's radio series, "What Price America," at 4:30 p. m. tomorrow over the Columbia network.

OUT OF THE National Park Service yesterday came a series of memorandums filled with the call of the wild and near-poetic discussion of the scenic wonders being boosted this season.

The Yellowstone National Park, it was pointed out, was formally opened for the sixty-seventh year yesterday, with 80 per cent of its wilderness still primeval, entered only by trails, full of bears, buffalo, lynx, mountain goats and "some of the best trout fishing in the country."

Even more primeval, officials said, is the Olympic National Park in northwest Washington. Ninety-eight per cent of its area can be reached only on foot or pack horse, and park officials describe it as "America's last frontier."

FARM PROGRAMS of the future—and where science comes into them—will be pictured for the American Association for the Advancement of Science by Howard R. Tolley, chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Department of Agriculture. He has it all written down in a speech to be delivered at the annual meeting of the association in Milwaukee on June 23.

SECRETARY OF LABOR Perkins also is about to make a speech. It will be delivered in New York today before the Democratic women there for their regional, whoop-it-up-for-the-party meeting.

Bob Burns Says—

Durin' the depression a few years ago folks figured out money-makin' ideas they'd never have thought of otherwise. That old sayin' about necessity bein' the mother of invention sure does hold true. I remember once when Grandpaw Snazzy lost his knife for a week—he used a funnel to eat his peas with.

Just yesterday I was talkin' to a movie actor about his salary cut. I said, "Mervin, it's too bad the studio has cut your salary from fifteen hundred down to eight hundred dollars a week."

He said, "Yes, it's a hard blow, but in a way I'm glad it happened. I've heard it improves a man's character to be practically penniless."

PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

THE YEARLING

By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

CHAPTER X

"Here's the 'coon. Here, Racket!"

A black nose protruded between narrow slats. A tiny black paw, like a nigger baby's hand, reached out. Fodder-wing lifted a slat and brought out the 'coon. It clung to his arm and gave a strange chirring cry.

"You kin hold him. He'll not bite you."

Jody cuddled the 'coon against him. He thought he had never seen or touched a thing so delightful. The gray fur was as soft as his mother's outing flannel nightgown. The pointed face was masked across the eyes with a black bar. The bushy tail was beautifully ringed. The 'coon nibbled at his flesh and cried again.

"He wants his sugar-teat," Fodder-wing said maternally. Le's take him to the house whilst the dogs is out. He's mighty skeert o' the dogs, but he'll git used to 'em. He don't like no commotion."

"What was ou-all fightin' about," Jody asked, "when we come up?"

"I wasn't into it," Fodder-wing said, with disdain. "It was them."

"What was it?"

"One o' the dogs wet in the middle o' the floor. They couldn't agree whose dog 'twas, done it."

o+o

THE 'COON SUCKED greedily at his sugar-teat. He lay on his back, cupped in Jody's arm, and clutched the sugar-filled cloth with his fore feet. He closed his eyes blissfully. His small paunch was already round with milk and shortly he pushed the sugar-teat away and scrambled to be free. Jody lifted him to his shoulder. The 'coon parted his hair and felt along his neck and ears with his small, restless hands.

"His hands is never still," Fodder-wing said.

Par Forrester spoke from the shadows beyond the hearth. Jody had not noticed him, he sat so quiet.

"I had me a 'coon when I were a young un," he said. "Hit were gentle as a kitten for two yare. Then one day hit bit a chunk outen my skin." He spat into the fire. "This un'll grow up to bite. Hit's 'coon nature."

Ma Forrester came into the cabin and went to her pots and pans. Her sons trooped in behind her; Buck and Mill-wheel, Gabby and Pack,

Arch and Lem. Jody looked puzzled at the dry and wizened pair that had bred these mountainous men. They were all much alike, except Lem and Gabby. Gabby was shorter than the rest and not unduly bright. Lem alone was clean-shaven. He was as tall as any of them, but thinner, and not so dark, and had the least to say. He often sat apart, brooding and sulky, while Buck and Mill-wheel, the most boisterous, caroused.

Penny Baxter came in, lost among them. Pa Forrester continued his discourse on the nature of 'coons. No one listened but Jody, but the old man relished his own words.

"That coon'll grow up to where he's big as a dog. He'll whop ary dog on the yard. A 'coon lives for one thing, to whop a dog. He'll lie on his back in the water and fight a hull pack o' dogs. He'll drown 'em, one by one. And bite? A 'coon'll bite one more time after he's dead."

Jody was torn between the desire to follow him, and his interest in the talk of the other Forresters. He was surprised to see that his father still carried the worthless fee—tenderly in his arms. Penny crossed the room.

"Howdy, Mr. Forrester. Proud to see you. How's your health?"

"Howdy, sir. I'm right smart tol'able, seein' as how I be near about done for. Truth to tell, I'd ought to be dead this minute and gone to glory, but I keep puttin' it off. Seems like I'm better acquainted here."

Ma Forrester said, "Set down, Mr. Baxter."

Penny drew a rocker and sat down.

o+o

LEM FORRESTER CALLED across the room, "Your dog lame?"

"Why, no. I've never knowed him to go lame. I jest figger on keepin' him outen the jaws o' them blood-hounds o' yourn."

"Valuable, eh?" Lem asked.

"Not him. He ain't wuth a good twist o' t'baccy. Don't you all aim to detain him when I leave here, for he's not wuth stealin'."

"You takin' mighty good keer of him, iffen he's that sorry."

"So I be."

"You had him on bear?"

"I've had him on bear."

Lem came close and breathed down heavily.

"Do he track good? Do he holt a bear at bay?"

"He's mighty sorry. Sorriest bear-dog I ever owned or follered."

Lem said, "I never heered a man run down his own dog that-a-way."

Penny said, "Well, I'll admit he's likely-lookin', and most ary man'd want him, lookin' at him, and I jest wouldn't put no notion o' tradin' in your minds, for you'd git fooled and cheated."

"You figger on huntin' some on your way back?"

"Why, a man allus has huntin' in his mind."

"Hit's mighty quare you toted a dog along wouldn't be no good to you."

The Forresters looked about at one another. They fell silent. Their black eyes were riveted on the feice.

"The dog's no good and my old muzzle-loadin' shotgun is no good," Penny said. "I'm in a pure fix."

The black eyes darted to the walls of the cabin, where the Forrester arms hung. The array, Jody thought, would stock a gun-shop. The Forresters made good money trading horses, selling venison and making moonshine. They bought guns as other men would buy flour and coffee.

"I never heered tell o' you failin' to git meat," Lem said.

"I failed yestiddy. My gun wouldn't shoot and when it did, hit back-fired."

"What was you huntin'?"

"Old Slewfoot."

A roar broke.

"Where's he feedin'? Which-a-way did he come from? Where's he gone?"

"You fellers shut up and leave Penny tell it. He cain't tell a thing, and you 'all bellerin' like bulls."

o+o

MA FORRESTER BANGED a pot-lid and lifted a pan of corn-bread a big, Jody thought, as a syrup kettle. The good smells from the hearth were overwhelming.

She said, "Don't get Mr. Baxter started 'til he's et. Where's your manners?"

"And where's your manners," Pa Forrester reproached his sons, "not givin' comp'ny the chancet to wet his whistle afore dinner?"

Mill-wheel went into a bedroom and returned with a demijohn. He pulled out the corn-cob stopper and handed the jug to Penny.

"You'll excuse me," Penny said, "if I don't drink deep. I ain't got as big a place to put it as you fellers."

They laughed uproariously. Mill-wheel passed the jug about the room.

"Jody?"

Penny said, "He ain't old enough?"

Pa Forrester said, "Why, I were weaned on it."

Ma Forrester said, "Pour me a noggin. In my cup."

She ladled food into pans big enough to wash in. The long trenchered table was covered with steam. There were dried cow-peas boiled with white bacon, a haunch of roast venison, a platter of fried squirrel, swamp cabbage, big hominy, biscuits, cornbread, syrup and coffee. A raisin pudding waited at the side of the earth.

"If I'd of knowed you was comin," she said, "I'd of cooked somethin' fitten. Well, draw up."

o+o

JODY LOOKED AT HIS father to see whether he too was excited by the savory plenty. Penny's face was somehow grave.

"All this here is fine enough for the Governor," he said.

Ma Forrester said uncomfortably, "I reckon you folks gives thanks, to your table, Pa, hit won't hurt you none to ask a blessin', long as we got comp'ny."

The old man looked about unhappily and folded his hands.

"Oh Lord, once more Thou hast done see fit to bless our sinnin' souls and bellies with good rations. Amen."

The Forresters cleared their throats and fell to. Jody sat opposite his father, and between Ma Forrester and Fodder-wing. He found his plate piled high. Buck and Millwheel slipped choice morsels to Fodder-wing. He passed them on under the table to Jody. The Forresters ate with concentration, silent for once. The food melted away before them. An argument arose between Lem and Gabby. Their father pounded on the table with his withered fist. They protested a moment at the intervention, then subsided. Pa Forrester leaned close to Penny and murmured in a low voice.

"My boys is rough, I know. They don't do what they ought. They drink a heap and they fight and ary woman wants to git away from 'em has got to run like a doe. But I'll say this for 'em—they ain't nary one of 'em has ever cussed his mammy or pappy at the table."
